After Ceasefire: U.S. Presence in Civilian Disguise?

By LESLIE GELB and ANTHONY LAKE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — You can almost hear a sigh of relief in the U.S. that the end of the road in Vietnam is near. But, an agreement in Paris will only mean, in fact, that the U.S. has arrived at a new crossroad: Will America take this great opportunity to declare peace and get out of Vietnam? Or will ways be found to stay in, and support Saigon?

The approach of a ceasefire agreement is setting off alarm bells all over Vietnam. They are warning that a ceasefire will not bring peace, but a new phase of the old struggle. Both Vietnamese sides are girding for the coming contest.

This alarm has also been heard in the Pentagon, the state department, and the U.S. mission in Vietnam. Evidence mounts that they are preparing to maintain an active commitment to the Thieu regime.

So once again the executive branch of government is deciding for which road Americans shall take, without the constraint of national debate. And there is no sign that alarms about U.S. post-ceasefire policies are ready to go off in the congress.

While all eyes are on Paris, here is what reliable news sources say is going on in Vietnam:

Hanoi and its southern allies are taking a number of steps to continue the struggle.

U.S. ANALYSIS

North Vietnamese troops may be folded into Viet Cong units to disguise their presence. These units have been issued orders to rely more heavily on captured American weapons, so that they as well as the Saigon regime can live off American supplies — as they did in the late '50s and early '60s.

The Saigon government has been making wholesale arrests of any and all "suspected Viet Cong." Thieu's administrative cadres are touring the countryside to speed preparations against a new outbreak of Communist political and quasi-military activity. A massive influx of American arms is being distributed.

Meanwhile, U.S. planners are putting together the outlines of a new American presence in Vietnam to support the Saigon government after U.S. troops have left. It reportedly would include:

—Ten thousand American civilian technicians and advisers, many under U.S. defence department contracts, to work with Saigon's armed forces. (Advertisements for these jobs have been placed in English language newspapers in Saigon, presumably to recruit retiring U.S. military personnel);

—Possibly hundreds of military attaches assigned to the embassy;

—Four consulate generals, to replace existing regional U.S. headquarters.

—Advisory teams at the province level as well;

—One thousand A.I.D. personnel;

—One hundred Vietnamese or French-speaking foreign service officers on temporary reassignment to Vietnam, reporting on the situation in the countryside;

—And a large-scale military aid program, if the United States succeeds in removing the requirement of the October agreement that military resupply take place only on a one-for-one basis.

In short, the United States is gearing up to

U.S. Pressure Behind Thieu

Times News Services

PARIS — The United States threw its support today behind the Christmas peace package proposed by South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu and accused Hanoi of using "high pressure" tactics in an attempt to impose an incomplete peace settlement.

Heyward Isham, representing the United States at the weekly session of the semi-public Paris peace talks, also told the Communists it was futile for them to continue clamoring for signature of the ceasefire agreement drafted in October by Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho.

"In our country, the high pressure salesman who tries to obtain immediate signature of an incomplete contract only succeeds in arousing suspicion about the transaction," Isham said.

Nixon arranged a meeting for today with his adviser, who returned shortly before midnight Wednesday night from nine days of bargaining in Paris with Tho.

Asked by reporters to comment on the promise he made seven weeks ago that "peace is at hand," Kissinger replied: "Well, that's a great phrase."

He added that he could not comment on the Paris talks until he had reported to Nixon.

Asked whether there would be peace by Christmas, Kissinger said he did not want to make any predictions.

Nixon's decision to summon Kissinger to Wasnington was regarded by observers as an indication that a final pact had not been agreed upon, although White House spokesman Ronald Ziegler would give no sign whether or not progress had been made.

Ziegler told reporters Kissinger would remain in contact via cables with Tho who is also leaving Paris, and a decision would be taken later whether and when new talks between them should be held.

Dump Blasted

SAIGON (UPI) — Two Communist commandos blew up South Vietnam's largest ammunition dump today in a series of explosions so powerful they lit up the sky over Saigon and shattered windows in the downtown area.

South Vietnamese command spokesmen said the two Viet Cong guerrillas slipped into the installation shortly before midnight, planted the charges and escaped into darkness although they were fired on by guards at the installation.

Four hours later, the first of four blasts rocked the downtown area and injured an undetermined number of people, most of them by flying glass.

Minor explosions were still erupting 10 hours later.

The spokesmen said the four giant explosions destroyed at least 1,000 tons of munitions — including huge bunkers jammed with artillery and mortar shells, bombs and napalm.

The blasts at the Tuy Ha citadel, just eight miles east of Saigon at Cat Lai port on the Dong Nai River, broke hundreds of windows in the capital and ripped plaster from the ceilings and walls.

Hijack Heads To B.C.

MONTREAL (CP) — A Quebecair jet hijacked in Wabush, Nfld., left Montreal at 3:48 p.m. EST today with a flight plan filed for Ottawa. Four crew members were aboard with the hijacker.

RCMP at the airport said the hijacker, identified as John Maxwell Stanford, had expressed a wish to see his father in Ottawa when the jet arrived there.

The aircraft arrived at Montreal at 2:30 p.m. and 52 passengers and one stewardess were allowed to disembark.

RCMP said the hijacker demanded to fly to Winnipeg via Ottawa. He earlier said he wanted to fly to Vancouver.

Left aboard the jet after the passengers were allowed to disembark were the pilot, the co-pilot and two stewardesses. One stewardess was allowed to leave with the passengers, a Quebecair spokesman said.

He identified the pilot as Captain Maurice Ouellet, the co-pilot as Uwe Munstermann and the stewardesses remaining aboard as Josette Cote and Lise Kazmerchuk. Stewardess Denise Gosselin left the aircraft with the passengers. All the crew are from Montreal.

Shannon Letcher, 18, en route from Wabush to her home in Moncton, N.B., said the hijacker stood at the back of the aircraft during most of the flight "issuing orders and waving his gun around."

"I was three seats in front and crunched down on my seat," she said.

She described the hijacker as a man in his mid-20's wearing rumpled, soiled clothing.

Richard Carriere, who works in Labrador City, said the hijacker was wearing a coat over a ski sweather and was carrying a rifle.

"I didn't know what was happening at first," Mr. Carriere said before he was whisked by police back into an airport lounge where passengers were being kept.

Ottawa Softens Bilingual Rules

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government today tempered its bilingualism policy by issuing a series of nine public service language principles designed to take the problems of unilingual employees and job applicants into account.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury said bilingual positions within the public service will be designated by the end of 1973 and properly occupied by the end of 1978.

The announcement shifted the government's target date for implementing functional bilingualism within the public service from the end of 1975 to the end of 1978 and switched the approach from requiring that a percentage of employees within various categories be bilingual to defining specific jobs as bilingual or unilingual.

One of the main features of the new program is that unilingual persons will be accepted as candidates for bilingual jobs if they are willing to take language courses and achieve the degree of language proficiency demanded by the job within a year.

The principle also guarantees a person currently holding a job security in that job even if it is designated bilingual next year and the employee cannot or does not choose to become bilingual.

Such employees will be given a year's notice that the job is to be designated bilingual, offered up to a year's language training to qualify under the new requirements, and be offered a transfer to an equivalent unilingual job if they didn't try to qualify or are not successful at doing so.

If they do not want to transfer they will be entitled to retain the position — even though it had been designated bilingual — and other personnel will be brought in to meet the bilingual requirements of the job.

Drury said that perhaps 25,000 of the 100,000 federal jobs existing across the country would be designated as bilingual by the end of 1978, although he said his estimate would be impossible to verify until job designation is completed next year.

The government's bilingualism policy has been criticized from two main directions — from unilingual public servants worried about their futures and from segments of the general public who maintain that the whole bilingualism effort is a waste of time and is being rammed down the country's throat.

While making major concessions to the first group, Drury made none to the second.

He said that of 16 million English-speaking Canadians, more than 14 million of them

NEWS BRIEFS

Truman Slipping

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Harry S. Truman continued to slip overnight in his fight to stay alive and his doctors said today his condition is "very serious." Hospital officials said the 88-year-old former president of the United States had a restless night and was unaware of anyone speaking to him.

Ulster Vote Set

LONDON (Reuter) — The British government announced today a March 8 date for a referendum in which the people of Northern Ireland will decide whether they want to remain part of the United Kingdom or link up with the Irish Republic.

Rhodesia Wheat Cut

CANBERRA (AP) — Prime Minister Gough Whitlam announced today the export of wheat from Australia to white-ruled Rhodesia no longer will be permitted. Whitlam said he had reviewed the circumstances in which wheat exports had been permitted since United Nations sanctions were imposed on Rhodesia in 1968.

Tests Underground?

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — France is busy preparing for underground nuclear tests in its Marquizas archipelago, 1,000 miles northeast of here, in a move aimed at silencing criticism of her atmospheric atomic blasts, according to news reports here Wednesday.

LONG JOHN DAYS OVER FOR A WHILE

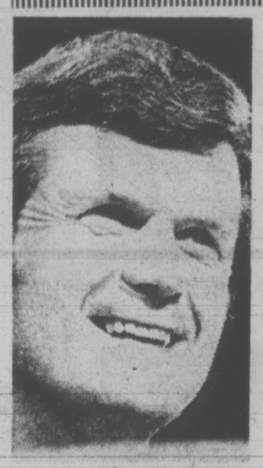
The forecast is for temperatures in the 40s on Friday and complete clearance of the city's snow by Saturday.

The winds have switched to a westerly direction bringing in warmer air off the ocean.

Two storms in the Pacific, however, are expected to hit Victoria together Friday, causing southeasterly winds at nearly gale force in exposed areas and dumping snow on the north coast and wet snow along the south coast of Vancouver Island.

This is expected to turn to rain as the temperature rises.



PHILLIPS

Phillips Leads TEAM In Routing Old Guard

VANCOUVER (CP) — Art Phillips cakewalked into the mayoralty of Canada's third-largest city Wednesday night, leading into power some political neophytes from an organization only four years old.

Phillips, a 42-year-old millionaire investment dealer, became the city's first-ever mayor from The Electors Action Movement (TEAM) and in the process carried enough of his followers into power to break a 25-year-old stranglehold on civic politics held by the rival Non-Partisan Association.

Although votes in the city of Vancouver were not counted, it was apparent Wednesday night that ratepayers in the Greater Vancouver regional hospital district had given overwhelming approval to a $95 million referendum for hospital construction.

TEAM won control of city council, school board and park board as voters turned out the NPA, former to keep the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation out of city hall.

TEAM took eight out of 10 council seats, eight of the nine school board seats and four of the seven park board positions.

But it was Phillips who led the way for his supporters.

He opened a wide lead from the first poll, increased it at every poll thereafter and ended the counting with a margin of more than 52,000 votes over his nearest opponent, winning more than 70 per cent of the vote.

In second place was Brian Campbell of the New Democratic Party, with Angie Dennis of the Committee of Progressive Electors third and independent Gordon Turner last.

Voting was light, with less than 39 per cent of the 265,000 eligible voters turning out for their third election in less than four months.

Another deterrent to a larger turnout was a heavy snowfall which dumped more than three inches of snow on the city.

Some blunders by the opposition and the retirement of Tom Campbell after three two-year terms as mayor helped Phillips win easily.

Campbell said he was stepping down both "for my own good and for the city's," leaving the way clear for Phillips, who will take over as mayor Jan. 1. He had been an alderman since 1968.

Campbell had represented the NPA, which failed to find a candidate to replace him.

The organization originally chose 50-year-old lawyer Bill Street as its mayoral nominee, then suffered acute embarrassment as local media played up a possible conflict of interest between Street's candidacy and his role as advocate before city council on behalf of private enterprise and as the NPA's chief fund-raising bagman.

If Phillips has his way, the election will mark the last time Vancouver voters will be faced with the chore of choosing 10 aldermen, nine school board and seven parks board position.

Astronauts Set To Head Home

HOUSTON (CP) — Eugene Cernan stepped off the moon today, leaving in the lunar sand perhaps the last footprint of the generation which first challenged space. Exploration by the Apollo moonships ended with Cernan's last words from the dusty surface before preparing for blastoff to earth: "Godspeed the crew of Apollo 17."

The lift-off was scheduled for 2:56 p.m. today, Victoria time.

". . . As I take these last steps from the surface, back home, for some time to come," Cernan said before entering the Apollo landing ship Challenger, "I believe history will record that America's challenge of today has forged man's destiny of tomorrow.'

Then he added: "And as we leave the moon and Taurus-Littrow we leave as we came, and, God willing, we shall return, with peace and hope for all mankind. Godspeed the crew of Apollo 17."

Turning, Cernan then followed his crewmate, Harrison

LOWER FARES BUT NO WAR

Times News Services

GENEVA — Lower air fares are in prospect for trans-Atlantic travellers following the breakdown of the international airlines' price-fixing machinery, although an all-out price war is not expected.

The International Air Transport Association announced Wednesday that scheduled airlines flying between the United States and Europe can set their own fares in open competition starting Feb. 1.

Meanwhile, United Air Lines announced Wednesday that a plan will go into effect next June which will allow passengers to fly between certain points in the United States at charter rates — about 50 per cent below normal fares.

United said that next year it would fly DC-8s at charter rates between New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Las Vegas and Honolulu.

Under the plan, the round-trip fare between New York and Los Angeles would be $129; at present it is $336.

It would cost $229 to fly round trip between New York and Honolulu, compared with the present $468.

To fly at the special rates, a passenger would have to buy a ticket at least 90 days before the day of travel.

The ticket would have to be bought from Trade Winds Tours of Hawaii, a travel agency which is United's partner in the venture.

The 40 airlines flying the North Atlantic and major connecting routes failed to agree on new rates after five months of negotiations.

U.S. lines wanted higher fares to offset the business they are losing to cheap-rate charter lines; the Europeans argued that the answer was lower fares to fill up the big planes they now are flying with many empty seats.

First Stock Bulletin Minus Insider News

British Columbia Securities Commission today published its first bulletin of decisions.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said actions of the commission would be published every week as a policy of fuller disclosure of activities in the stock exchange industry.

William Irwin, superintendent of brokers, said it was in response to a long-felt need.

The bulletin contains information on stock trades, escrowed shares and delisted companies — but no mention of insider trading.

Irwin said he could not comment on the absence of insider trading reports as the matter was still under consideration.

A similar bulletin put out by the securities commission in Ontario contains information on insider trrading.

Some of the information, regarding suspensions and delisting of companies, has been available in daily reports put out by the Vancouver Stock Exchange but the reports are not widely circulated.

Irwin said: "The need has long been recognized for a convenient source of reference containing the rulings, decisions and policies of the commission.

"We have felt that those members of the legal and accounting profession practising before the commission should have the benefit of historical data to assist them in more adequately representing their clients before the commission.

"In addition we were of the opinion the public had a right to know something of the commission's activities under the Securities Act, 1967," Irwin said.

The first bulletin reports that three companies, New Denver Exploration Ltd., Williams Creek Gold Quartz Mining Co. Ltd. and Finning Tractor and Equipment Company Ltd., have completed primary distributions of their shares.

The bulletin also announces that five companies have been suspended from trading.

The bulletin announces an indefinite suspension for Ronrico Explorations Ltd. for failure to provide the commission with financial reports.

All suspensions were under 77A, failure to file quarterly financial reports.

Temporary suspensions can be extended by the commission if the reports are not filed by the companies involved.

Reinstated by the commission are Dictator Mines Ltd. and Viking Mines and Petroleums Ltd. which had been suspended earlier for failure to supply financial reports.

Next bulletin of the commission will be out on Dec. 23, Irwin said.

Apollo: On Way Home

There they rested before preparing to leave the lunar surface in the late afternoon and rejoining the third man of Apollo 17, Ronald Evans. He has been orbiting the moon in the command ship America since Monday's lunar landing.

The climb of Schmitt and Cernan from the lunar surface ended a historic decade of exploration which began May 25, 1961, with a challenge by the late President John Kennedy to place an American on the moon.

"Apollo's last surface exploration was the program's most ambitious and successful. Cernan and Schmitt, the 11th and 12th men to walk the moon, spent more time on the surface — a total of 22 hours, five minutes; made the longest single excursion in time, seven hours, 37 minutes; and covered the most distance in three excursions, a total of more than 22 miles.

They collected 334 pounds of moon rock and soil, more than half of the total amount gathered by all the five previous Apollo missions. Their science treasure included samples of an orange-colored dust never before seen on the moon. The astronauts erected an atomic-powered science station which already joins four earlier stations in sending data to earth. And the Apollo 17 duo also explored types of lunar formations never before visited.

The astronauts picked up 177 pounds on their third outing.

The total of 334 pounds includes the weight of the rock boxes, core tubes and sample bags, but is still about 40 pounds more than called for in the flight plan.

Schmitt told Mission Control that he thought the extra weight would be no problem.

"Gene and I both lost 20 pounds apiece on this mission," he said.

. . . AIR FARES

The Europeans are expected to announce sizable rate reductions, possibly with payment of all or part of the fare required 90 days in advance.

The new fares will have to be approved by the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board as well as aviation authorities at the European end of the flights.

An IATA spokesman said further talks to arrange a unified schedule of fares "are non-conceivable, at least until next summer."

Although there will be an "open market" situation, the IATA spokesman said, all out warfare over fares is not expected.

"The airlines have too much economic sense for this."

Five North American airlines and several European companies have already possibly agreed on fare structures while the Canadian and European governments have said they will place strict controls on the charter operators, spokesmen said.

Vietnam: New Crossroad

do all it can for Thieu, except for the direct use of American military forces.

It may seem natural that Washington would want to take what steps it can after a ceasefire to improve Thieu's chances for survival. After all, many will argue, why not make some new, fairly marginal investments in the situation since we have done so much in the past?

The danger is that maintaining a large American presence in Vietnam gives a hostage to the future. Thieu would then have less incentive to reach an accommodation with the Viet Cong, so the fighting would flare up at some point — raising the issue of American military reinvolvement. American aircraft will still be poised on offshore carriers and at bases in Thailand to come to Thieu's rescue. When the president is faced with a decision to send the bombers back over Incochina, the presence of so many Americans in Vietnam could tip the odds towards military reinvolvement. We would then be back to where we are today.

In the past, the congress has sometimes supported and sometimes criticized the president for his decisions about Vietnam. It has never anticipated them. If the congress does not move to help shape future Vietnam policies now, it can have no one to blame but itself if things go wrong later.

The first order of business for the next congress should be to hold hearings, in the house and in the senate, on what is going on in Indochina. The problem will not be the terms of the peace agreement, but the actions our government is taking within the context of the agreement.

The congressional committees need to ask such questions as: Are we still obliged to commit American forces to Thieu's defence or the defence of any other anti-Communist regime in Saigon? What safeguards can the congress legislate to prevent American military reinvolvement before it becomes an accomplished fact? Who is paying the bill for the American civilians attached to the South Cietnamese armed forces? What exactly will all of those U.S. military attaches be doing? Are the president's powers as commander-in-chief sufficient to order U.S. military forces to intervene for the protection of these Americans in Vietnam?

If we have learned anything at all from our decade of tragedy in Vietnam, it is that we ought to ask such questions before we proceed, not after. We should know by now that if anything can go wrong in Vietnam, it will.

the weather

Some cloudiness is expected in most areas of B.C. today but a storm in the Gulf of Alaska will give overcast skies and showers of rain or snow to the north coast. A Pacific storm approaching from the southwest will bring milder air to B.C. on Friday. However, the system will bring snow to most coastal areas Friday morning which will then turn to rain during the day. Coastal temperatures are expected to climb into the low 40s for the first time in most areas since Dec. 2.

do not speak French, and of six million French-speaking Canadians, nearly four million of them speak no English.

Because of that, he said, the public service must have bilingual personnel in designated positions, both to speak to people in their mother tongue wherever it is feasible and to supervise and serve unilingual public servants who are working in an area where the other language is dominant, but not overwhelmingly so.

Federal statistics show that the government is vastly increasing expenditures on bilingualism promotion programs even though the percentage of those who claim French as their mother tongue is falling significantly.

According to a special Statistics Canada bulletin, between 1961 and 1971 the number of those claiming English as their mother tongue increased by 2,313,276.

But the number of persons claiming French as their mother tongue increased by only 156,247.

Vancouver: An Easy Win

He said Wednesday he plans to introduce a modified ward system by the next election, in 1974, with voters choosing aldermen from specific areas of the city with perhaps a view running in the city as a whole.

The only holdovers on council will be Marianne Linnell of the NPA, Harry Rankin, the COPE gadfly and debating wizard and Walter Hardwick, the urban planning expert from TEAM.

Joining them on council will be well-known architect Geoff Massey, lawyer Jack Volrich, electrical engineer Fritz Bowers, lawyer Michael Harcourt, Dr. William Gibson, social worker Darlene Marzari and Setty Pendakur, a professor at the University of British Columbia.

"We'll give Vancouver the best government it's ever had," Phillips promised.

THUMB PERMITS PRESSED

TACOMA (AP) — Caught in a crossfire between proponents and opponents of legalized hitch-hiking, a state lawmaker has proposed a compromise plan to regulate but not ban hitch-hiking in Washington State.

A key to the plan would be a requirement that hitch-hikers carry a state-issued permit before thumbing rides.

The scheme was offered Wednesday by State Senator Joe Stortini.

To get a hitch-hiker's identification tag, a person would apply to a state agency and for a small fee receive a brightly colored tag to present to motorists, Stortini said.

The goal, he said, would be to keep escaping felons, vagrants and undesirables off the highways.

Pension Options Open: PM

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal government agreement to make more money available to British Columbia for a guaranteed income plan for pensioners would also apply to other provinces, Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday.

He was replying to a comment made Monday by Premier David Barrett of B.C. that the federal government had agreed to make greater contributions toward the cost of the $200-a-month plan for pensioners.

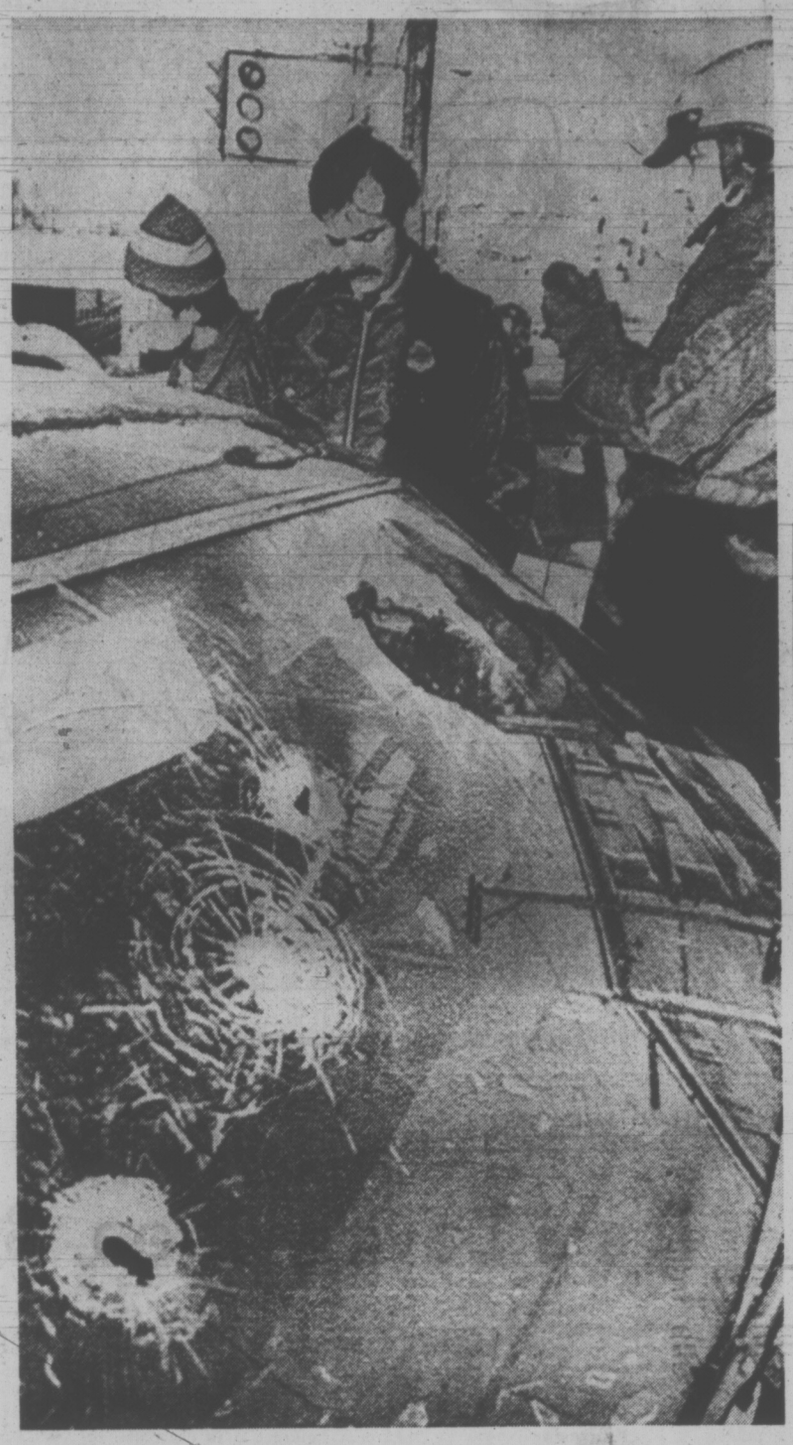
The B.C. plan is expected to cost $65 million a year.

Trudeau said the whole purpose of the Canada Assistance Plan, a joint federal-provincial undertaking to complement other income security programs, would be to adapt to the various definitions of need in various provinces.

"We always pay 50 per cent of the shot," he said.

Trudeau said if Barrett's NDP government wanted to change the allowable fixed assets level of the plan, the federal government would agree.

But he was not able to say how far the federal government might be prepared to go.



BULLET-RIDDLED getaway car in Montreal is mute testimony to an abortive robbery attempt at a credit union office. Speedily on the scene, police shot out the windshield of the car, Wednesday, killing one of the people in it. Three other occupants of the car were taken into custody.

B.C.'s Man in 'Frisco May Sue Government

Steven Turbis, the man in charge of British Columbia House in San Francisco, says he will consider legal action against Alex Macdonald B.C.'s attorney-general and industrial development minister.

Macdonald said Tuesday the B.C. House operations in both Los Angeles and San Francisco had been a "dead loss" to B.C. taxpayers and that both offices would be closed down within a month or so.

He singled out the San Francisco operation for failing to communicate with the government.

Turbis, an assistant trade commissioner appointed to the San Francisco office in 1969, said he considered some of Macdonald's statements incorrect and damaging.

He denied that communication with the government had been bad.

"We have always tried to stay in communication with the government. For any report they asked for, they got one very promptly."

Turbis said he doubted Macdonald had studied the situation properly.

"If Macdonald had really examined what is happening here and was serious about it, he would have come up with some alternatives rather than to get rid of the whole thing," he said.

The two B.C. houses were established by the former Social Credit government to help promote trade between B.C. and the U.S. West Coast, especially the California area, and to assist U.S. companies interested in establishing branch operations in B.C.

The two houses also provided a headquarters for B.C. government tourist promotion staff.

Preserve This Great Asset

Attorney-General Macdonald's proposal to close up the B.C. House establishments in both San Francisco and Los Angeles may raise little interest among the public. These headquarters were set up by Premier Bennett, for the dual role of encouraging industrial trade and the tourist business. It may be difficult to assess exactly how valuable their contribution was in this regard. The average British Columbian, whose money has gone for their upkeep, has probably had no contact with these centres and will not miss them.

But if the government's economy move should extend to British Columbia House in London — and there is some indication that it might do this — there could be a much more noticeable public reaction. The London headquarters for travelling British Columbians preceded the "Bennett era" by many years, and long ago became a traditional centre at which to collect mail, meet friends, catch up on the news from home, and obtain information and help in a multitude of ways.

The service at B.C. House has been of direct benefit to individuals as well as to commercial interests: there must be many thousands of persons who have availed themselves of "our B.C. House" over the years, to say nothing of the immense job that was done for Canadian servicemen during the Second World War.

To close London's B.C. House would be to deprive British Columbians of a valuable centre overseas, and the loss would be felt by increasing numbers now that travel to Britain and the Continent has become almost universal.

Close San Francisco and Los Angeles if necessary. But hands off No. 1 Regent Street. It's doing a job for us.

Everybody's for Peace, but . . .

Even as Dr. Kissinger returned to Washington yesterday with the results of his prolonged peace meetings with the Hanoi representatives, reports told of thousands of North Vietnamese troops pouring into South Vietnam and of United States aircraft bombing them in the mountain passes.

The Americans are accused of trying to change the terms of the cease-fire agreement which Dr. Kissinger and the Hanoi spokesmen drew up in October, when peace was announced as just a few days away. Premier Thieu in Saigon is accused of trying to delay a treaty. But Hanoi, for its part, has been equally adamant in insisting on clauses which Washington and Saigon refuse to accept. Up to now, no one has wanted peace urgently enough to concede key points.

But the Paris delegates have been more silent lately than some of Hanoi's allies. This could suggest that some progress has been made with Dr. Kissinger and that the elusive ceasefire agreement may again be imminent.

With President Nixon's return to office in the recent elections, the state of the Vietnam negotiations has lost considerable public interest. The matter of American prisoners remains the chief point of public concern in the United States.

It is difficult to keep alive a war which nobody wants. It appears to be equally difficult to kill off a war which nobody wants to hear about. The disengagement of half a million U.S. troops, as promised by President Nixon, has tended to put the war off the front pages. Perhaps only its termination will put it back on.

"First, a testimonial from the British Conservative Party—now, Royal endorsement . . ."

DAVID HUMPHREYS

To Europe by Way of London

LONDON — Prime Minister Trudeau has successfully and perhaps significantly completed what is really his first visit to a leader of western Europe in western Europe. The main purpose of his only other official visit to Britain was the Commonwealth leaders conference early in 1969 (in spite of some impressions at the time that it was to enjoy London night life). Mr. Trudeau's three-day visit for talk with British Prime Minister Edward Heath was probably the most unconventional the British leader has organized at short notice. Careful specific preparation, the usual essential pre-condition for summitry, was almost totally lacking. Officials prepared guest lists as the itinerary progressed. Mr. Trudeau flattened protocol at Buckingham Palace by announcing that the queen accepted in principle an invitation to visit Ottawa next summer when it had by no means been cleared through the royal channels. He happily went along to a dinner at 10 Downing Street where, by coincidence, Mr. Heath had planned to entertain his Common Market commissioners, good men for Mr. Trudeau to know.

Serious Side

Mr. Trudeau's subdued style in London this time may be compared to that earlier so-called unconventional visit. This one was really the more remarkable because what set it apart wasn't Mr. Trudeau's extracurricular activities, but rather his approach to the serious side, the reason for his coming at all. Almost certainly, Mr. Trudeau's timing was forced by Mr. Heath's plan to visit President Nixon in Washington soon. If that reads like a commentary on Canada's position between the U.S. and Europe, Mr. Trudeau at least seized the initiative and made a little show of his own here, instead of playing host to a British prime minister on the fringes of his real reason for travel, Washington.

His strategy was to set such a modest objective that he couldn't possibly fail. His main purpose, he told his press conference, was to ensure on the eve of Britain joining the Common Market that Canada's point of view concerning an outward-looking liberal-trading Common Market was well understood by the British prime minister. Turning coincidence to advantage he noted that his timing was in fact good because his visit followed directly on the annual meeting of top British and Canadian trade officials.

Seen in this light Mr. Trudeau's visit was in fact the culmination of at least a full year's preparation by cabinet ministers, officials, High Commissioners and himself. They have all hammered repeatedly on the general line that turned out to be Mr. Trudeau's chosen theme this time. And if the British government, from Mr. Heath to the lowest official on the Canada desk, wasn't fully aware of it, External Affairs could have packed up. But it was all well-known and appreciated.

Apparently Mr. Trudeau has rediscovered Western Europe. In reality, as well as in theory, it is evidently taking its place in the highest of Ottawa priorities, if only because by the foreign affairs white paper standard of economic interest, it offers the greatest challenge and opportunity. Western Europe has come full circle in Ottawa's "in" inner sanctums.

Either by design or haste, Mr. Trudeau confined himself almost exclusively to the economic sphere, although he talked with Mr. Heath about preparations for a conference on European security and co-operation, about which both countries have interests.

Insofar as Mr. Trudeau's foreign policy concepts have always tended to be shaped by purely national self-interest he was probably being true to form.

What the prime minister did not say was whether Western Europe means anything special to Canada politicially or culturally. There was nothing in London to match even External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp's speeches that must form the preparations for Mr. Trudeau's visit. "I have been impressing upon the Common Market Canada's continuing need for Europe in political, economic and cultural terms," he told the Toronto Women's Canadian club last January 14.

Then before the Senate committee on foreign affairs in March Mr. Sharp slipped in an interesting cautious reference. Canada's economic relations with the U.S. meant "we need energetically to explore the possibilities of other areas we may have underplayed. It is all the more necessary to do this in Europe now that Britain has joined the EEC."

A month later the newly-appointed High Commissioner here, J. H. Warren told an audience, "Whether in detente or times of tension, we continue to need the strength and wisdom which each side of the Atlantic can bring to each other. Canada is part of that strength and, I believe, of that wisdom." There is in all an implied recognition of Western Europe's importance to Canada, perhaps as the counterweight to that inevitable U.S. influence.

Formerly Canadians placed the Commonwealth in that role. Not only has Mr. Trudeau not given up on the Commonwealth, he is determined to make quite an occasion of next year's Ottawa conference, as his invitation to the Queen indicates. Mr. Trudeau apparently considers his all-purpose foreign policy still the counterweight. He gave no concrete evidence here that he considers Western Europe more than one among equal weights.

What evidence did Canada have of success in its stated aim of diversifying trade when trends showed continuing growth in economic relations with the U.S.? "I think the success we have had after my trip to the Pacific rim countries, the greater trading with Japan and our success in certain types of sales to China — I think — are the evidence of greater diversification. It doesn't spell any substantial lessening of our exchanges with the U.S. . . . The important thing is that we do not be absorbed into that pattern completely."

Has Canada neglected Western Europe? By coincidence, during Mr. Trudeau's visit the Royal Institute of International Affairs published an article by a Canadian taking up this point. It was a piece about Canadian foreign policy in the 1970s by Assistant Professor Robin Ranger of the department of political science, St. Francis Xavier University, Nova Scotia. He wrote: "The idea of using Western Europe and the U.K. as a counterweight to the U.S. was the basis of post-war Canadian diplomacy, discarded in 1968 because of its alleged over-emphasis on military ties with NATO, but now enjoying a renaissance."

After Mr. Trudeau's visit renaissance may be too optimistic a term. History will decide whether the all-directions diversification, heralded in the white paper, was the required new dimension or whether on the contrary it distracted Canadian energies and thought from Western Europe just as it began to formulate momentous changes of unparallelled importance to Canada.

Mr. Trudeau spoke after his talks of his rapport with Mr. Heath. Perhaps after the conviviality of Downing Street and Chequers, he or his successor will be encouraged to visit the dark continent itself.

Canadian pleas to the British to do their best with those Europeans must ring strangely in German or Dutch or even French ears. It was Willy Brandt, not Mr. Heath, who singled Canada out for reference at the Common Market summit in Paris.

Still Confused

Like President Nixon, who after his election looked forward in one sentence to working with the community and in the next sentence with its several states, Canadians may be still confused about Europe. The Canadian proposal for a special ministerial-level relationship is something for discussion with Brussels and not apparently, with London. It was pressed hard in Brussels this year. Yet Brussels, the European Commission, proposes while the governments of the countries dispose. If Ottawa can't win support in London and Paris, the special relationship (as distinct from bilateral trade agreements Ottawa has been negotiating) is a dead issue. There isn't much life in it now.

Regardless of such modalities, Canada is moving into a new relationship with Europe. It is dictated by European forces, political and economic. It remains to be seen what Canada will make of the challenge. Mr. Trudeau's London visit should be the opening of a new period. Measured against the possible impact of a longer, better organized, more extensive visit, its accomplishments were indeed modest. But compared to the last four years, it was a welcome initiative.

MAURICE WESTERN

It's a Lovely Idea, But . . .

OTTAWA — On his brief visit to the national capital, the new premier of British Columbia demonstrated that he is one of the great optimists of the 20th century.

Mr. Barrett made a number of representations to the federal government. The one which excited the most attention, naturally enough, was the request that Canada should seek to reopen the Columbia River Treaty. What it lacks, and ought to have, is an "inflation kicker." As the Americans now "are skinning us" (a kindly criticism since they are not to be blamed for it), we must ask them to be "reasonable" and to consider the great advantages they derive from the treaty.

It will be an unhappy day for the Canadian ambassador if he is required to call at the State Department with this request.

The advantages mentioned by Mr. Barrett are certainly of high importance. For that very reason the Americans became most impatient with us during the years and years that were required for negotiation and ratification of the treaty.

Protracted Inquiries

First, there were the protracted inquiries by the International Joint Commission; unduly protracted, in the American view, because of the tenacious bargaining of the late General Andrew McNaughton.

Then in 1961 a treaty was signed in Washington by John Diefenbaker. It could not be ratified because British Columbia, owner of the resource, withheld consent. Only in 1964, after the Pearson government had reached an agreement with Premier Bennett and renegotiated matters with Washington, was it possible to submit the treaty with an attached protocol to Parliament for ratification.

The treaty was criticized at the time and afterwards. Outside Parliament it was opposed by General McNaughton; in the House mainly by the New Democrats. The most persistent parliamentary critic was Bert Herridge who for many years was member for Kootenay West.

But two pertinent points are to be noted. The first is that the treaty was modified to suit the demands of British Columbia. W. A. C. Bennett, premier at the time, is a Social Crediter; David Barrett is a New Democrat. But, regardless of politics, governments inherit the obligations of their predecessors. Mr. Barrett, being not solely a party head but also the premier of British Columbia, cannot ignore the stand his province took, despite his personal or party view that the agreement was improvident. It was in fact endorsed, wisely or otherwise, by provincial voters.

The second point is that Mr. Barrett justifies his request with an argument which did not enter into the discussion at that time. It was not even mentioned in the debate although other matters, such as interest rates, were.

There was an NDP amendment to Paul Martin's motion but it was not concerned with inflation. It proposed to add the words: "Subject to the negotiation of a further protocol or an exchange of letters clarifying the right of Canada to divert up to 6,000 c.f.s. or five million acre feet annually from the Columbia River for the beneficial use of the prairie regions and for multiple-purpose use of water so diverted."

If there was any worry about inflation at that time, it was not shared by the governments in Ottawa and Victoria or, presumably, by the U.S. government. Confidence in the ability of governments to manage the economy was then much stronger than it is today. No party in Parliament foresaw the great inflation of the '60s and early '70s. Certainly the NDP would have been unimpressed by warnings: it had no fear of deficits and thought the other parties excessively cautious in the demands they proposed to make on the economy. Inflation-fighting was not, and is not, an NDP specialty.

Mr. Barrett now feels that the United States should make more money available to British Columbia. On what will we base our representations?

The official views of the government of Canada, as they were expressed in 1964, will not be helpful. Mr. Martin listed the advantages of the treaty, which he described as "tremendous."

In concluding his case, he said: "I think it has been demonstrated beyond reasonable doubt that the treaty and protocol constitute an arrangement that will redound to the enormous advantage of this country for years to come. They represent the efforts of 20 years of careful consideration and the considered policy of two governments of Canada, as well as the viewpoint and the wish of the owner of the resource itself, the Government of the Province of British Columbia."

Obviously it cannot be said that the American skinners took us by stealth or unprepared. Parliament accepted Mr. Martin's motion; only one Conservative, the late Mr. Tim Cooper of Rosetown-Biggar, voted with the NDP against the treaty. The Americans then paid — in cash.

It is beyond doubt that inflation, since 1964, has upset the cost calculations — not solely in respect to the Columbia treaty. Both countries have contributed to inflation although it would be a difficult business to arrive at a just apportionment of the blame.

Beyond Canada's Power

Obviously, however, we cannot call the Americans to account for our contribution. It might be useful now if we had made some official complaints about theirs. The fact is, however, that it is not the practice internationally for one government to instruct another government in the management of its financial affairs. In our case, resistance to temptation may have been relatively easy: the more our major trading partners inflated, the less cause we had for concern that inflationary policies here would price us out of world markets.

Nor can we point to any "have regard to" clause such as the one which failed to provide any protection when we inserted it earlier into the famous Anglo-Canadian wheat agreement.

Mr. Barrett may have some cause to hope that the Americans will be helpful in their own self-interest. If not, it is difficult at this late date to discern the basis of a representation to be entrusted hopefully to the Canadian ambassador in Washington. It does appear from the premier's figures that we are being skinned by inflation but, of itself, this is not much of an argument. After all, President Nixon is attempting to do something in that field while our position, barring unutterable calamity, is "no, no, never."

The Campaign Endorsed

During last year's war in Bangladesh, as many as five million housing units were burnt down in an indiscriminate manner by the occupation army, thus creating a great void in this field. Housing is an elementary need for all human beings and Bangladesh is no exception. The tropical heat and the downpour of the monsoons there, ranging over one hundred inches, make a secure shelter most essential for every family.

I understand that Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, Executive Director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, has in her own selfless way decided to promote a project for the construction of one thousand housing units in Bangladesh urgently for people whom the devastations of war deprived of the basic necessities of life. This would, no doubt, be a very valuable contribution and will fill a keenly felt need.

In her characteristic manner, Dr. Hitschmanova has been campaigning tirelessly to reach her objective as quickly as possible. While I am full of admiration for her endeavors, I wish also to thank you for lending the facilities of your powerful organ to support her appeal to the generous public. A. Momin, High Commissioner, The People's Republic of Bangladesh, Ottawa.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of Dec. 14, 1912:

The heavy purchasing of property by representatives of the Canadian Northern Pacific Railway Company, near the junction of Carey Road and Douglas street, as reported by the Times yesterday, is significant of the company's plan of operations in the northern part of the city. The extensive property acquired during the last few weeks and the area of other holdings, now the subject of negotiation, show that the company undoubtedly intends to establish facilities for the handling of freight at that point. The line now under construction has its terminus this side of Parson's Bridge. It will be extended almost due east along the north shore of Portage Inlet.

'CLASS BIAS IN REPORTS'

Chile News Slanted

By LOUIS WOLF GOODMAN

(Goodman is assistant professor of sociology at Yale University.)

If one were to rely solely on U.S. coverage of news from Chile for an understanding of current developments in that country, it would not be unreasonable to conclude that the government of Salvador Allende is vastly unpopular, illegitimate, incompetent and repressive.

One could further conclude that the Chilean left has been held in check only by the strength of the army rather than a commitment to democracy.

Such conclusions are fundamentally erroneous and based upon a superficial understanding of the economic and political struggles being waged and pro- and anti-government forces in Chile. The U.S. press continues to foster misconceptions about Chile:

● That the Allende government is vastly unpopular in Chile. This assertion is a clear example of a class bias in press reporting. Information used by foreign correspondents in Chile tends to represent more accurately the attitudes of the upper class and segments of the middle class than those of the working or popular classes.

A September 1972 survey of Greater Santiago commissioned by the opposition-controlled weekly, Ercilla, gives evidence about government support which differs from the view in the U.S. press.

These results indicate that close to 60 per cent of Santiago's population looks favorably on the present government's performance, a majority feel that the strategies of the opposition are harmful, and more people would vote for Allende today (36 per cent) than did in Santiago in 1970 (34 per cent).

Equally important, this survey shows that Santiago's small upper-income group overwhelmingly opposes Allende's Popular Unity coalition, the middle class is divided and the lower class is enthusiastic.

Moreover, Greater Santiago always trails the provinces in support for Socialist candidates. No mention of the above findings was made in the U.S. press despite the wide discussion they received in Chile.

● That Mr. Allende's efforts to move the country toward socialism are causing widespread economic chaos and hardship.

Mr. Allende was elected on a platform that explicitly rejected the moderate reform path of development which characterized the previous Christian Democratic administration. The electoral support received by the left was hardly an overwhelming mandate but it gave Popular Unity the opportunity to move the nation toward socialism.

In Chile, the greatest economic difficulties are being felt by those who have benefited most under capitalism, i.e., the upper and middle income sectors. There are shortages of consumer goods. It is now more difficult for the relatively comfortable sectors of the population to maintain their patterns of consumption.

Last December's March of the Empty Pots was essentially a protest by middle- and upper-class housewives who found it difficult to obtain certain desired goods in their own neighborhood stores.

Similarly, strikes by shopkeepers in the central business district and work stoppages by professional people are middle-class protests. These store owners and professionals do not serve the poor, nor do they want the government to continue its effort to control distribution for the well-being of low-income sectors.

The Olympic Legacy

By JONATHAN STEELE
Manchester Guardian

MUNICH — The Olympic Games last a fortnight, but the problems they create go on a good deal longer.

Inevitably, Munich is faced with the task of integrating the huge concrete housing complex laughingly known as the Olympic Village into the life of the city. Some good quarrels are rumbling here and inevitably the name of Franz Josef Strauss crops up in them.

If you go up to the village on a weekday afternoon you can see at least one vaguely rural aspect to it. The police patrol its vast empty walkways on horseback. It's the best way to get around.

The village where the athletes were housed in September was always intended for use as living accommodations later. Already the "women's village" has been converted into students' flats with a waiting list of more than 2,000.

Although the surroundings are bleak, Munich's superb new underground gets students down to the university in 10 minutes, and into the town centre in 15. The "press city," where the thousands of Olympic sports writers were put up, will become a municipal housing estate.

The main problem concerns the "men's village," which is still quite empty. An estate agent's temporary office set up for would-be buyers at the entrance has been closed, and all inquirers are directed to offices in town.

Three months later, with no private tenants moving in, the taxpayer finds himself footing a countinuing bill. What is more, the rent has gone up as part of the cost-of-living adjustment the owners managed to slip into the contract at the beginning.

The magazine Der Spiegel recently disclosed that Franz Josef Strauss, the leader of the Bavarian Christian Social Union, is a close friend of a lawyer, named Franz Dannecker, who was an adviser to one of the firms who built the Olympic village.

The chairman of the supervisory committee which awarded the contracts for the site happened to be the then federal finance minister. His name — Franz Josef Strauss.

STRAUSS

At a lower level many of the companies which put their money into souvenirs — beer mugs, plates, candlesticks, etc., marked with the Olympic five rings — find themselves with a pile of unwanted goods.

The Olympic committee took more than $2 million from the sale of licenses, at about $3,300 a time, for the right to use the Olympic emblem. But apart from sports clothes which have sold well, the shops are full of excess goods, while the firms rue the cost of overproduction.

SOCIETY'S PAWNS

By ALBERT SINOBERT

(An editorial in 'The Forgotten People,' a monthly publication of the Native Council of Canada for Metis and Non-Status Indians.)

Penal reform is the topic of conversation, newspaper articles, political rallies and numerous other communication devices throughout this country. With all the energy and space used to exchange views on the subject, a person is misled into believing that penal reform is of vital concern to the general public.

But that is a false assumption. The average citizen doesn't give a hoot for anything concerning penal reform. The public has been reading about it for decades. Thousands of them are more than just aware of the dillemma. Thousands more are in the correctional fields as professionals, or semi-professionals.

Virtually every adult in this nation has read or heard on television or radio of the failure of the Canadian prisons to render any sore of effective rehabilitative programs for the prisoners.

Still nothing is being done to change the system. Why?? Because that is all the penal system is to the public — a conversation piece — something to talk about to keep the party moving — a scribble pad next to the telephone — just something to doodle with — it isn't intended for serious discussion with the aim of improving the system.

So what does that mean to us, the incarcerated, and those on the outside who are concerned about us on the inside?

It means that we have to stop looking for help from certain areas — certain areas like politics, where men talk about changes without making them happen. Certain areas like circles of professional people and government leaders, who cannot afford, for their own sakes, to rock the boat or change the system.

We need to look for help from non-political organizations which have convicts and their future in mind. These organizations, like the Native Brotherhoods, are working hard to help prisoners get out of, and stay out of penitentiaries. They must have more support, and the only direction that support can come from is via the people who are being, or have been affected by the system.

We are pawns in society's game of "crime and punishment," but through organized effort, we can help ourselves.

Ireland: Sour Fruit of Extremism

By ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

LONDON — When they visit the Republic of Ireland, tourists find relief from the strident and the mechanical in their own societies. It is all so quiet, so old-fashioned, so gentle. In the rain on a nice soft day, waiting out a trout or sitting by a turf fire, Ireland is tranquility.

So it seems. How easy it is to forget the role that violence has played in Ireland's history and still does in her contemporary mythology. Even the terror in Ulster these last few years has seemed somehow separate from the easy-going South, as the accent of the North is so much harsher. But it is not separate.

O'BRIEN
. . . mystique

Politically, Ireland is a characteristic product of extremist policies, in this case of colonialism, met by revolution. The genius of moderation in British imperialism, wherever else it may have existed, did not here. Over centuries there were invasion, repression of language and church, colonization, plunder, starvation, all accompanied by a political arrogance worthy of the United States in Vietnam.

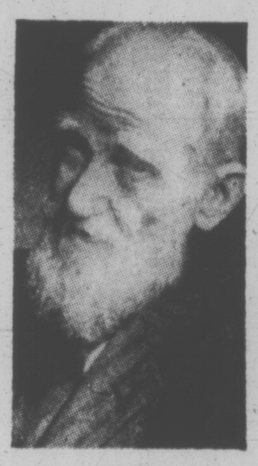
There was a last chance for rationality and moderation in the relationship between the two islands at the turn of this century. The long effort to win home rule for Ireland from the parliament at Westminster was at the point of success when the Orangemen of the North and their right-wing British supporters blocked it.

A decade of blood followed before partition and independence for the South. Bernard Shaw, writing in 1929 of that period of bombs and Black and Tans, said: "Future historians will probably see in these catastrophes a ritual of human sacrifice without which the savage of the 20th century could not effect any redistribution of political power or wealth."

But Ireland has not seen her history with the cold sardonic eye of a Shaw. Violence has been romance, the hard men in trench coats heroes. The mythology has so permeated politics that only a few years ago leading figures in the governing party, Fianna Fail, helped to start the provisional IRA campaign of terror in Ulster.

All that has been true, but is it still? Events of recent days suggest that this could be a time of decisive change in Ireland, political and psychological. The bomb that took four lives in Dublin may have shattered the romance of violence; it certainly showed that the reality is abhorrent to Irishmen as to others.

Always, one extreme tends to provoke another. The increase in IRA activities in the Republic has brought on government measures of a repressive and indeed authoritarian character.



SHAW
. . . 20th century savages

The Prime Minister, Jack Lynch, dismissed the entire governing board of the supposedly independent national radio and television service for interviewing Sean Mac-stiofain, the IRA leader. The interview was said to have violated a rule against broadcasting material that could advance organizations using violence for their ends. Critics say Lynch simply used the occasion as a pretext to get control of broadcasting.

To suppress the IRA directly, Lynch proposed a bill allowing judges without juries to put anyone in prison for up to five years for belonging to an illegal organization—on the testimony of a single police official that he has reason to suspect someone of membership.

The burden is on the suspect to disprove the suspicion. The bill aroused deep doubts and seemed likely to fail until the bombs went off, when opposition collapsed.

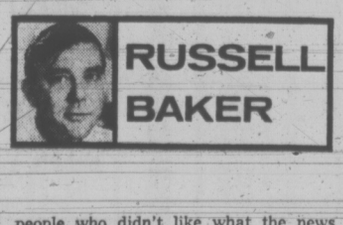
Conor Cruise O'Brien, the ex-diplomat who is now a labor politician and probably has the keenest opposition eye in Dublin, saw the irony in the Lynch crackdown on violence. The prime minister's own Fianna Fail party has lived by glorifying "patriotic violence," he wrote in The Observer, London.

O'Brien was worried about authoritarian tendencies in the Republic. But he also saw hope in what Lynch has done: "He may have begun to destroy the mystique of nationalistic sectarian self-righteousness." It is from that mystique, O'Brien rightly said, that not only the provisional IRA but in their different way the extemist Protestant secret societies of the North have grown.

Whether Lynch's policy does mean a historic shift in Irish attitudes could depend in good part on a response from the old antagonist, Britain. Prime Minister Heath and his government could find a way of offering the believers in Irish unity new hope, for example, by the often-discussed all-Ireland council.

There might then really be a profound move away from the hard men, away from the long tradition that Sean O'Casey summed up in the phrase "This murdering hate."

Dig Those Wild Fossils



A 135,000-year-old ox bone with human writing on it has been found in France. The writing, according to the Associated Press, is a grouping of symbolic arcs, branches, angles and parallel lines, which proves, among other things, that even 135,0000 years ago most people has trouble with French.

Alexander Marshack, the archeologist reporting the find, describes it as "pre-writing." He is impressed by its age because hitherto nobody had thought the French of that period — 50,000 to 75,000 years before Neanderthal man — were smart enough to write their names, much less symbolic arcs and branches, on an ox rib.

Archeologists are a cautious bunch. Devotion to the scientific principle hobbles their poetic imagination. Thus they are reluctant to speculate on what this message from the dim past says or how it came to be written, although they believe it to be the work of Acheulian hunters.

Most of us would not know an Acheulian hunter from a Chicago Bear, but we would have very little difficulty putting this ox rib in perspective. It was almost certainly the work of a man named Pierre, or its pre-Neanderthal equivalent.

Pierre must have been a sort of early press secretary for a famous Acheulian hunter named Francois, and the ox rib is a press release. It seems likely that all press releases in those days were written on ox ribs, since oxen were very plentiful then and ribs of the comparatively rare mastodon would have been saved for writing the news on.

In those pre-historic days, of course, people who didn't like what the news was telling them did not attack "television" or "the press." They denounced the distortions of the "biased mastodon rib."

We may assume that Francois was running for high office among the Acheulian hunters and that Pierre had composed the press release to accuse Francois's rival, Henri, of being soft on prehistoric horses.

The day before, one of the workers on Henri's campaign staff would have quit in a huff because his advice was being ignored, and would have revealed to the mastodon rib that Henri, once while leading a great hunt in Bordeaux, had stopped his hunters from killing a herd of pre-historic horses at Chateau Haut Brion.

"I predict — and you can write it on wolf ribs," Henri had said, "that these beasts, if allowed to survive and become post-historic horses, will someday return as much as $35 on a $2 investment."

When this story hit the caves in the morning mastodon ribs, there was a tense strategy session at Francois's ribquarters. "This Henri is a dangerous radical who, if not rejected by the people, will turn the Acheulian hunters into a tribe of idle long-shot bettors expecting a handout from the post-historic horses," someone would have said, politicians being the same all through history.

It is easy to hear Francois's voice speaking over the great chasm of time. "I didn't know we had pre-historic horses right now," Francois said. "I was under the impression that they would come later, in the Paleolithic era."

"Haven't we already had the Paleolithic era, chief?" Pierre asked.

"How do I know?" Francois asked. "When you live in these remote periods you've got to be a spelling genius to know what era your fossils belong to."

The upshot of this would have been a decision to issue an ox rib denouncing Henri for being a dupe of prehistoric horse-ism.

Pierre had just finished cutting the symbolic arcs, branches, angles and parallel lines in the rib when a woman ran screaming into the cave. "A giant man-eating pterodactyl is about to attack us," she cried.

Handing the odd rib to Francois for an okay, Pierre said, "Just another hysterical woman. Ignore her. Pterodactyls either aren't due on earth for another 25,000 years or all vanished 150,000 years ago. Having a typical college education, I can't remember which."

They were still standing there when the giant man-eating pterodactyl flew in and ate them, and four of Francois's advancemen, in two gulps. This is why it is possible today to earn $35 on a mere $2 investment, or go bankrupt trying.

Pulp Mills Curb Expansion

By Al Forrest
Times Business Editor

No new expansion in British Columbia pulp mills is expected for some years after completion of projects already under way.

Outlook for pulp exports is improving but the market still suffers from oversupply.

Under the circumstances, says Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. president R. G. Rogers, it would be hazardous for British Columbia companies to invest another nickel in additional pulp production until the market situation improves.

Already in the works is a $100 million forest products complex being constructed by British Colubia Forest Products Ltd. at Mackenzie.

The project includes a $65 million bleach kraft pulp mill due to come on stream in January. The pulp mill will employ 240 men.

Also in the Mackenzie project, a new sawmill will employ 235 and a stud mill 130.

Crown Zellerbach has also committed itself to expansion projects worth $32 million, including $25 million being spent to consolidate and modernize lumber and plywood facilities in the Okanagan.

The projects under construction are a $12 million sawmill and planer mill at Armstrong, a $10 million sawmill-planer mill and plywood plant modifications at Kelowna and a $3 million sawmill expansion project at Lumby.

All are expected to be in full operation early in 1973.

However, no new funds are being committed to expansion projects until after the provincial government budget comes down in early February, according to industry spokesmen.

New projects decided upon are expected to involve lumber and plywood production where demand is high, rather than pulp. The pulp market situation improved somewhat during the first nine months of 1972 with sales up 18 per cent over the same period in 1971 and production down fractionally. But it would be some time before demand had fully caught up with supply.

Last of a Series On What's Ahead For Forest Firms

Crown Zellerbach president Rogers commented: "Our lumber and plywood business is providing us with a real source of satisfaction, reflecting the sharp upswing in housing starts in Canada and the United States in the past couple of years."

"Opinions differ in the industry as to whether the strength of this market will continue through 1973.

"I'm less optimistic that some, although there's every reason to believe any weakening of demand and price for lumber next year will be modest at worst. We expect the plywood market to continue in 1973 comparable to this year," Rogers said.

"Newsprint markets appear to be heading for a reasonably bright period in 1973 with little new capacity in North America. The stength of newsprint, however, represents only a mild recovery from the severely depressed conditions caused earlier by production capacity that outpaced demand.

"Our company's results in the past have all too often reflected the peaks and valleys in commodity markets and in recent times we have been taking steps through diversification to help correct this situation," Rogers said.

Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. sales in 1971 were $206 million, compared with $704 million by MacMillan Bloedel and $133 million by B.C. Forest Products.

B.C. Forest Products also looks for a good sales year in 1973. The company reported sales for the first nine months of 1972 of $117.4 million, about 17 per cent ahead of the same period in 1971.

President Ian Barclay was in eastern Canada and unavailable for comment.

However a BCFP spokesman said the pulp and newsprint market is improving and the outlook for 1973 is generally favorable, despite an anticipated drop in U.S. home construction.

"With the money supply growing in both the United States and Canada, demand for wood products should continue to be strong," the spokesman said.

BCFP is less dependent upon U.S. conditions than other major firms as it sells 70 per cent of its production in Canada.

Canadian Forest Products Ltd. said it is considering converting from fuel oil to natural gas in 1973. The company has already announced plans to establish a black liquor oxidation system at Port Mellon, its Howe Sound pulp division.

Weyerhaeuser Canada Ltd. this year completed a $10 million sawmill project at Vavenby, B.C., to employ 250 workers.

Sooke Forest Products will complete a $1 million expansion program at its Sooke mill about Jan. 15. No additional employees will be hired, a company spokesman said.

In all there were 800 separate forestry companies operating in B.C. during 1972 but only a dozen were large companies.

B.C. Has Ample Inventory To Supply Industry Needs

British Columbia has ample trees to supply the provincial lumber industry until 1985 and probably many years beyond that, according to a study of the sawmill industry released by the provincial government.

By 1985 demand for trees will have reached 2.9 billion cubic feet per year, still well within the 3.4 billion cubic feet of allowable annual cut, the study says.

The 1985 wood demand will be enough to satisfy the expected demand for production of 13.2 billion board feet of lumber, 3 billion square feet of plywood, 8 million tons of pulp and 3.1 million tons of paper and paperboard.

The predicted demand for 2.9 billion cubic feet of logs compares with an expected demand for 2.3 billion cubic feet in 1975.

Total cut in 1971 was 1.99 billion cubic feet.

In 1971 total lumber production in British Columbia was 8.9 billion board feet, of which 6.8 billion was exported.

MOST TO U.S.

Of the exported lumber, 80 per cent went to the United States, identical 6.1 per cent went to both Japan and the United Kingdom and less than 2 per cent went to each of Australia, Puerto Rico, Belgium, Luxembourg, France, Algeria, West Germany and South Africa.

The study by the department of industrial development, trade and commerce, concludes:

"The United States is expected to retain its position as this province's main customer since its demand for lumber is forecast to increase substantially in the future.

"Imports will be required to supply a portion of this demand and British Columbia manufacturers are ideally located to supply this market.

"Nevertheless the industry will have to continue developing its markets in other areas of the world and it is in such areas that aggressive marketing programs will have to be maintained.

"Possibly the most important problem facing the sawmilling industry is increasing costs. British Columnbia's forest industry is faced with the need to remain competitive in world markets and is therefore not necessarily free to pass on added costs.

"Strong competition from substitute products could displace lumber in some of its traditional markets if the price of lumber continues to increase relatively faster than the price of competing products."

Trade and Commerce Minister Alex Macdonald said there is room for development within the B.C. saw illing industry although substantial amounts of capital will be required.

Prospective investors will find that most new operations will have to be located in the northern portions of the province for that is the area that retains the greatest potential for sawmilling development.

Copies of the report are available from the economics and statistics branch of the department.

Major Paper Makers Hike Price

NEW YORK (AP) — Three major paper producers in the United States and Canada have announced increases of $5 a ton for newsprint, effective Feb. 1, and industry sources said Wednesday others were considering similar moves.

Great Northern Paper Co., a subsidiary of Great Northern Nekoosa Corp., was the first to raise prices, to $170 from $165 a ton in New York, attributing the increase to higher labor and overhead costs.

It was followed by Price Paper Corp., a subsidiary of the Price Co., Ltd. of Quebec, and Southland Paper Mills, Inc., of Lufkin, Tex., which serves newspapers in the U.S. South, Southwest and Midwest.

In addition to Price, several other Canadian companies have boosted prices $2.75 to $7 a ton recently, but these increases applied in Canada only. For American purchasers, Price's quotation is $170.

Newspapers in the U.S. depend on Canadian mills for 60 per cent of their newsprint supply, says the American Paper Institute.

The API reported that in the first nine months of 1972, U.S. manufacturers of newsprint were operating at 98 per cent of capacity, and Canadian mills at 84.3 per cent.

One source in newspaper publishing and two securities analysts said they had heard several companies were considering increases and possibly would announce them in the near future.

Grizzly Valley Reserves Sold

CALGARY (CP) — An agreement has been reached between Alberta and Southern Gas Co. Ltd. and Quasar Petroleum Ltd. involving sale of proven and potential gas reserves in the Grizzly Valley area of British Columbia.

In a news release, Alberta and Southern said it will make an initial prepayment of $3 million to Quasar and its partners against future delivery of gas.

Alberta and Southern has also agreed to make further prepayments prior to production of at least $13.5 million as additional reserves are proven.

Quasar will be entitled to 34 per cent of the initial prepayment and Canadian-American Resources Fund Ltd. partnerships will be entitled to 51 per cent. Division of future prepayments will be decided at the time payments are made.

(Incorporated under the Laws of Canada)

5% Convertible Subordinated Income Debentures due December 1, 1989

TransCanada Pipelines will redeem all of the above Debentures outstanding on Thursday, January 11, 1973 at 103.75% of the principal amount of Debentures plus accrued interest to the redemption date.

Prior to that date, you have the option of converting these Debentures into Common Shares of the Company at the rate of 2.466 shares for each $100 Debenture (equivalent to $40.55 per share). Cash settlement for fractional shares at market value will be made directly to Debenture holders upon conversion.

Please note that interest on these Debentures at the rate of 5% per annum for the period June 1, 1972 to December 1, 1972, being $2.50 per $100 Debenture has been paid. In addition, the Debenture holder who elects to convert will receive quarterly dividend of 25c per common shares received upon conversion provided conversion takes place on or before the record date, December 22, 1972.

We strongly recommend the conversion of these Debentures.

Remember:

Your right to convert these Debentures expires On January 10, 1973

$6 MILLION EXPANSION BY LABATT

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Labatt Breweries Wednesday announced a $6 million expansion project here that will start after the first of the year.

Labatt vice-president Don McDougall said the first phase will be construction of a 25,000 square-foot warehouse, scheduled for completion next summer.

The entire program will take three years to complete. Other new facilities include new fermentation and aging cellars, extensive revision of the brew house and an expanded bottling plant.

Funds Drop IOS Subsidiary

TORONTO (CP) — Two Canadian mutual fund groups announced Wednesday they are moving to sever contracts with a management firm controlled by the troubled IOS Ltd. empire.

The Commonwealth and Regent groups said their directors have voted to terminate contracts with Lifetime Financial Services Ltd., controlled by Transglobal Financial Services Ltd., which is in turn controlled by IOS Ltd.

The two mutual fund organizations said Lifetime has performed its duty properly but Transglobal has been named a defendant in a suit and Exchange Commission SEC in the United States.

That suit, against a number of IOS officials and others, claims IOS was at the centre of "one of the largest securities frauds ever perpetrated." It involves the alleged misappropriation of some $225 million in assets.

Commonwealth and Regent said in a joint statement:

"The directors determined that in the best interests of the funds and their shareholders, Lifetime should not continue to be associated with the funds in any capacity so long as Lifetime is owned or controlled directly or indirectly by any company or person named as a defendant in the SEC complaint."

The two groups have seven mutual funds with assets of about $215 million. Lifetime provides management, advisory, service and distrubbution contracts.

John Clement, minister of consumer and commercial relations, told the Ontario legislature Wednesday that the Ontario Securities Commission had found "no evidence of any attempt at any time by either the former or present IOS control groups to tamper with or direct the activities of the Canadian management."

He said the commission will continue to watch the funds but does not feel that it would be in the public interest at this time to freeze the assets of the funds and apply to the court to appoint a receiver-manager.

The seven funds are: Commonwealth International, Commonwealth International Leverage, Commonwealth International Venture, Regent Growth, Regent Pension, Regent Venture and Lifetime Retirement.

'Male Peacock' Aids Domestic Producers

TORONTO (CP) — One of the greatest single impacts on the textile industry in the last few years has been the "almost sudden awareness" of men's fashions, the president of Dominion Textile Ltd. said Wednesday.

Ronald H. Perowne of Montreal said the consuming public is becoming more style and fashion conscious every year and the industry has had to keep abreast of the rapid changes.

"Today more than 50 per cent of the underwear shorts made for youth and men is other than white, more than 75 per cent of the shirting fabrics we sell is other than white, and we see the male peacock in full array with the tremendous variety of attire that is sold for formal evening wear."

He told a meeting of the Toronto Society of Financial Analysts that the fickle nature of consumer habits favors domestic producers because it is difficult and chance-taking to rely on long-term suppliers with long-term commitments.

Land Slowly Shrinks

HAIFA, Israel (Reuter) — The Sinai Peninsula, captured from Egypt in the 1967 war, is drifting away from Egypt as the Red Sea expands at an annual rate of three millimetres (one tenth of an inch), says Prof. Yakov Ben-Tor, of the Jerusalem Hebrew University.

City Pilot Says Forces 'Muffed' Arctic Search

A Victoria pilot says criticism of Martin Hartwell, the 46-year-old flyer who survived his ill-fated mercy flight Nov. 8, is a cover-up for inefficient armed forces search and rescue methods.

Barry Morris, base manager with Victoria Flying Services, is a former pilot with Hartwell's employers, Gateway Aviation Ltd. of Edmonton.

He says he knew Hartwell and the area where Hartwell's twin-engine Beechcraft 18 crashed, having worked for Gateway for 18 months.

He says that by focusing attention on the fact that Hartwell was not qualified to navigate on instruments alone "the fact that search and rescue muffed it" is being glossed over.

"I think he (Hartwell) is getting a raw deal," he says, "... so search and rescue can take the heat off themselves."

He refers to reports that Hartwell did not hold an instrument rating. Pilots without these are normally restricted to flying only when they can maintain visual contact with the ground.

Hartwell is reported to have been flying under heavy overcast when his plane hit a 2,000-foot hill about 180 miles off his scheduled course from Cambridge Bay to Yellowknife in the Northwest Territories.

Morris says the armed forces equipment is unsuitable for searching for downed pilots in the rugged north. He says the federal transport department, which had called off the search, only resumed it after a public outery.

Morris says search and rescue operations in the north should be carried out by commercial and private pilots who know the country and their colleagues and who are familiar with the terrain and flying conditions.

Naval Ships Scrape Off San Diego

Nobody was hurt and damage was minimal when two Esquimalt-based destroyer-escorts "brushed sides" during a towing exercise off San Diego Sunday.

An armed forces spokesman said today the incident occurred when HMCS Terra Nova was towing HMCS Mackenzie.

The spokesman said the towing exercise is a regular part of the program.

"A bit of paint was chipped," he said, "but damage was minimal and nobody was hurt."

The two ships carried on in the exercise.

They will be back in their home port next week, Mackenzie at 10 a.m. Monday and Terra Nova, 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Recreation Complex Underway

Central Saanich council has approved a draft land-use contract for the $1.3 million recreation centre to be built by Wester Recreational Resources Ltd. on Mount Newton Crossroad.

"All the bargaining is finished," said Mayor A. M. Galbraith. The contract is now in the hands of lawyers. Galbraith said a public hearing date will probably be set by the end of this week.

The recreation centre will include a 25-metre swimming pool, skating rink and eight sheets of curling ice. Parking will be developed in four stages with space available for 500 cars.

Alex Izaat, company spokesman, predicts that the complex may be open by late spring. The land-use contract covers development of 14 acres of the 18-acre site owned by the company.

Oak Bay Mulls Tighter Safety For Pools

Oak Bay council will consider new legislation at its Dec. 18 meeting to tighten up safety requirements for privately-owned swimming pools.

Council's lands and buildings committee Wednesday agreed to recommend that fences of swimming pools be four feet in height and made of vertical fencing, rather than horizontal. Gates, to be of the same height, should have self-closing locks.

At present regulations allow horizontal fencing to be used and gates to be lower than the fence.

Building inspector Bill Skead told the committee:

"The city of Victoria doesn't believe on fencing regulations. Their attitude, probably on legal advice, is they don't want to get into the business."

Skead added that the city was probably reluctant to assume the responsibility of protection.

Ald. Norman Pimlott said, "I think a child's life is worth more than that."

Agreeing that the proposed regulations wouldn't stop "a determined seven-year-old" from climbing the fence, Ald. Brian Smith observed:

"We want to stop a two or three-year-old, who has no idea of danger, from stumbling into it."

Skead suggested that regulations should also be considered for the large plastic swimming pools being used in Oak Bay.

"This is a grey area as far as building permits is concerned," he said. "Just like plastic tools sheds, they're considered temporary structures."

Municipal engineer-planner Geoffrey White warned:

"When people fill up a plastic pool with garden water and let the neighbors' kids use it there's a health hazard there."

It was agreed to ask the advice of Dr. J. L. M. Whitbred, senior medical health officer for the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board on the necessity for rules governing plastic pools.

Smith cautioned regulations for plastic pools should be considered carefully so as not to penalize people who have the small, wading type.

"Otherwise," he quipped, "you could end up with fences around bathtubs — and who would police that one!"

THE MESSAGE HITS HOME

OTTAWA (CP) — Inflation hit Wednesday in what probably was one of the final holdouts in the country.

Prices jumped at the two cafeterias on Parliament Hill. Worse, they may go up at the Centre Block restaurant, the dining place of MPs, senators and assorted hangers-on, when the new Parliament sits Jan. 4.

But food prices on Parliament Hill are still rock bottom because the House of Commons pays the staff and prices are geared to return basic costs, plus a small "profit."

Erickson Likely Overseer of Harbor Plan

City council was expected to approve this afternoon the appointment of internationally-known architect Arthur Erickson as design "overseer" for the integrated redevelopment of several key sites dotted around the Inner Harbor.

Erickson, 48, of Vancouver, who designed the highly-praised Canadian pavilion at Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan, will likely be commissioned for $35,000, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

The proposal at today's meeting of council is little more than a formality requiring official endorsement, as the matter has already been considered by aldermen in committee.

Pollen said the relevant resolution recognizes the "great progress" that has been made in the whole Inner Harbor area, with the acquisition of the Ocean Cement site and the impending shift to public control and use of other important stretches of waterfront.

Erickson's commission, he said, will be to prepare "conceptual plans" in the framework of an over-all plan for the Inner Harbor, including privately-developed sites as well as those projects which will be undertaken by the public sector.

He said council is aware that $35,000 is a lot of money to spend on this master-plan, but considering the international reputation and high calibre of the architect, and the importance of the harbor's future to the city, "we feel it is money well worth spending."

In addition to the Ocean Cement which it already owns, and which will be vacated by the spring of 1973, the city is now negotiating for the purchase of the waterfront property across the water owned by Marathon Realty, the Canadian Pacific subsidiary.

Agreement on price is expected soon, and from recent talks between city representatives and cabinet ministers in the provincial government the indications are that the province will help with funds.

Negotiations are also going well with Imperial Oil for the acquisition of the Causeway garage adjacent to the Black Ball ferry terminal.

The terminal itself is on land leased from the provincial government, and the city hopes to regain control of this when the firm relocates.

Other recent developments indicating that the long-mooted Inner Harbor renewal plan is really starting to gell were:

—Allocation of $280,000 by the provincial government for construction of a water-level promenade along the Causeway in front of the Empress.

—The announcement this week that Bapco Paint Ltd. is vacating its site at Laurel Point, which will be developed as a hotel-apartment-recreation complex.

All these pieces in the harbor jigsaw will be assembled by Erickson, Pollen said, adding "He has expressed a strong desire to become personally involved in the future of the Inner Harbor.

Among other projects, Erickson has designed the Man in the Community pavilion at Expo 67 in Montreal, the mountain-top Simon Fraser University in Burnaby and the MacMillan Bloedel office tower in Vancouver.

While Population Grows, Birth, Death Rate Drops

Greater Victoria's senior public health officer has underlined again the staff shortage he has complained about repeatedly in recent years.

With half a month left in 1972, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread has issued the annual report of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health for 1971.

Health board staff cover the capital region from Jordan River to the Gulf Islands and the annual report takes the pulse of Greater Victoria in many areas — from the rate babies are being born and old people are dying to the incidence of venereal disease, chickenpox and illegitimate births.

While the population of Greater Victoria continues to climb — from 154,000 in 1962 to 204,500 at the end of 1971 — the rate at which people are being born and dying is dropping.

The birth rate per 1,000 population has decreased from 23.1 in 1962 to 12.8 in 1971 and Whitbread cites three possible reasons: publicity on the population explosion, increasing availability of contraceptive means and a change in the public idea of the ideal-sized family.

While the number of deaths in 1962 was 1,931 and this has climbed to 2,220 last year, the death rate per 1,000 population has fallen from 12.5 a decade ago to 10.8 in 1971.

"Life expectancy has increased and many of our elderly citizens living in their own homes, boarding homes, nursing homes . . . are over 80 years of age."

Cardiac disease was the major cause of death through the district in 1971, claiming 774, with malignancies second at 480. Death by accident, including traffic accidents, ranked fifth with 119 killed, while suicides were eighth with 35.

"The number of illegitimate births has changed very little in the past 10 years," the report says, "when related to total population, and has increased from 1.4 illegitimate births per 1,000 population in 1962 to 1.6 per 1,000 population in 1971."

Victoria had most of these, with 143 from a population of 60,897. Saanich, with a population of 65,052, had 65. There were 10 in Oak Bay and 18 in Esquimalt.

Among communicable diseases reported to the health board, mumps soared to 453 cases last year from 110 in 1970. Chickenpox dropped from 351 cases in 1970 to 236 last year and measles plummeted to 10 cases reported last year from 49 in 1970.

There were 250 cases of gonorrhea and 30 of syphilis in Greater Victoria last year, up fractionally from the year before.

But the ratio of cases to population is far lower in Greater Victoria than the provincial average and only about a quarter the ratio found in Greater Vancouver.

The ratio of gonorrhoea cases per 100,000 of population in Greater Victoria was 125 while it was 324 for B.C. and 516 in Greater Vancouver.

Among the variety of services conducted or supervised by the health board staff are sewage disposal and food outlet inspections, clinics for preschoolers, expectant parents, for immunization and transient youth, home nursing and inspection of rest homes.

More Funds Urged For UVic Athletics

More money should be allocated to athletic activities at the university, according to UVic senate commission report released Wednesday.

The report, commissioned by president Hugh Farquhar as a guideline for future academic development of the university, says the student body should be encouraged to increase its contribution to support of athletic programs.

Sports on campus are funded through a certain proportion of students' Alma Mater Society fees which are matched by a contribution from the administration.

"The present AMS fee of $6," the report says, "is well below that allocated to athletic activities at many other Canadian universities. The average across Canada is $15."

The report says the university has used the stadium very little for its own sports purposes with non-university bodies accounting for 95 per cent of its use.

The university however assumes the greatest share of the stadium's operating costs.

It costs $30,000 a year to run the stadium, with $10,000 provided by the municipalities, $3,000 collected in rental fees and the rest paid for by the university.

Set Entrance Standards— UVic Study

A major study on academic development at the University of Victoria says entrance standards "appear to be as low as any in Canada" and recommends entrance exams by 1974.

It is one of 59 proposals in a report released Wednesday night to the senate. Titled Report of the Commission on Academic Development, it is the culmination of six months of hearings and study which has prompted a good deal of speculation on its findings.

Created in February to establish guidelines for the university's future academic development, the commission, under vice-president D. J. MacLaurin, came up with two major recommendations.

Firstly, "that the University of Victoria should be a relatively small institution pursuing the highest standards and specializing in those fields in which it has particular advantages."

And secondly, "that the academic offerings of the University of Victoria should be available for and be of service to the broadest possible spectrum of the whole community . . ."

Another recommendation to combine all modern languages into a single university department, one of 59 proposals in a major UVic commission report released Wednesday, has been termed "backward" by language professors.

"This recommendation was made by people ignorant of the modern language area," Terry Rickwood, head of the department of Slavonic and Oriental studies said today.

"No self-respecting university would do this," Rickwood said, "it's a retrogressive step without any rationale."

Faculty association president John Greene also criticized the recommendation and said the association would consider the entire report in depth and "take a stand" on its proposals.

"Serious deficiencies" in the standard of work produced by graduate students in certain departments was cited by the commission which recommended supervisory committees be created to review graduate students' work.

Dean of Graduate Studies Sam Jennings said today he didn't know the rationale behind such criticisms and would not comment on the recommendations without further study of the report.

The commission also recommends graduate faculties "revise present policies relating to directed reading courses" suggesting that students performance in these courses should be more adequately assessed.

Arbitrarily raising the entrance standards, to a C-plus average for example, is not the solution, the commission says, since there is a wide variation in course grading among high schools.

It recommends therefore establishment of entrance and advanced placement examinations for all in-coming students by 1974.

The report also advises there be a university official responsible for continual investigation of course grades, methods of evaluation and graduating standards.

Evaluation of professors and teaching effectiveness also came under the commission's scrutiny with a recommendation that each department be required to make a formal annual review of the teaching effectiveness of each instructor.

NO CUT FOR LESS WORK

Employees of Woodward Department Stores will shift to a 37½-hour work week from 40 hours this spring with no reduction in pay, it was announced Wednesday.

The company decision applies to its nine stores in B.C. and six in Alberta.

Harold Joy, vice-president of personnel, said part-time employees also will not suffer financially because their pay is based on their proportion of the full work week and salary.

Joy said "oh heaven's no, that would be most unpopular" when asked if the company's decision to reduce working hours was to save money on salaries, especially with the new $2 minimum wage. He said the lowest hourly wage in Woodwards is $2.15.

The change directly affects 5,500 full-time staff but altogether 14,500 to 15,000 with part-timers, he said. In Victoria, approximately 350 are affected.

Joy said the reason for the change is because Woodwards has "always led the way in employee benefits. Woodwards was the first to go to 40 hours." It is the first major retailer to move to 37½ hours, he said.

With the 37½-hour work week, the maximum work day will be 7½ hours instead of eight. No specific date has been chosen in the spring for the change.

Ring Thief Blames Drugs for Crime

A 20-year-old man was sentenced to six months definite and six months indeterminate by Judge William Ostler in provincial court today after pleading guilty to stealing rings worth a total of $1,249 from a downtown jewelry shop Tuesday.

Blaire Fraser Dickson, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of theft over $200.

Dickson was arrested Tuesday on a Vancouver warrant by two Victoria drug squad members who recognized him. By coincidence the officers were near the store, Grassie Firbanks Jewelers, 1209 Douglas, when the robbery occurred at 2:15 p.m.

In court today Dickson admitted he was a heroin addict.

In sentencing, Ostler said he saw heroin as "the most compelling reason" for Dickson's thefts. The judge said he hoped the accused would serve part of his sentence in a forestry camp, where the new environment would help separate the young man from his addiction.

Alexander Resumes Post

H. L. Alexander, assistant general manager of Victoria Press Ltd., will resume the additional duties of director of advertising on January 1, J. C. Melville, general manager, announced today.

Alexander relinquished his advertising post October 2, 1969, to act as owner's representative during construction of the new Victoria Press building.

J. A. Hamilton, who was acting director of advertising during this period, becomes assistant to the vice-president, Victoria Press Ltd., on Jan. 1.

Wallace Elected UVic Chancellor

Robert Wallace, a 40-year veteran in Victoria's university community, was elected chancellor of UVic by a landslide vote of the convocation tabulated Tuesday.

Wallace, who received more votes than the other four candidates combined, will succeed Roderick Haig-Brown as titular head of the university.

When he retired as professor and vice-president of UVic in 1971, it was said by a fellow faculty member: "in the mind of the public Bob Wallace was the university."

Wallace started as a student at Victoria College in 1933. He moved with it to the Lansdowne campus in 1946 and to Gordon Head campus in 1962

The 66-year-old Wallace was presented with a UVic Alumni Award in 1969 for "his outstanding service to the cause of higher education" and was elected man of the year by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce last October.

The new chancellor received 958 votes in the convocation election and was followed by Willard Ireland launched by the Security (326), Robert Molson (171), William Featherstone (77) and David Conover (60).

Also elected were six convocation representatives on the university senate: C. Hilary Butler, David Dunsmuir, Charles Gregory, K. R. Thornton, S. A. Van der Voort and K. O. Wright.

Where Do We Find New Jobs, Bapco Workers Ask

By
ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

When an industrial plant decides to shut down, it's people who are hurt.

Some companies just cut and run. No notice, no consultation — to heck with the employees.

Bapco Paint Limited is different. It is being responsible — notice, relocation pay, cooperation with Canada Manpower, discussions with employees.

But it's still a plant closure, and people are hurt.

What will a 60-year-old man do, with a semi-skilled trade and no pension?

Or a 35-year-old father with four children who can't see finding another $700 a month job in Victoria?

Between now and almost a year from now, between 90 and 105 Bapco workers are going to have to adjust — to new jobs, new towns, loss of pay — maybe no job at all. The stabilizing forces — job, house, hometown, family — are thrown into upheaval.

Last night, the members of Local 1947 of the International Brotherhood of Painters and Allied Trades held their regular monthly meeting — ironically on the 13th of the month, and 36 hours after Bapco announced it is shutting down its 66-year-old Victoria factory and moving to Surrey.

The company said it had to move because the present location and limited space makes modernization impractical, and because of disadvantages of being on Vancouver Island when major markets are on the mainland.

Forty employees (half from the plant, half from the office) will move with the company, 10 will retire early and the rest will be laid off. The union represents the plant workers, roughly 90.

The questions on their minds as Local 1947 president Owen Williams opened the meeting were the bread and butter ones — severance pay, seniority, pensions, jobs.

Williams said the severance pay — the company calls it relocation allowances, he calls it "conscience money" — is one week's pay for every year's service, with a minimum service of two years to qualify, plus one week for every year over the age of 40, with a ceiling of 52 weeks benefit.

He says it is "reasonably generous." It is — the union has no severance pay provision in its contract.

What happens to my severance pay if I leave the company between now and when the plant finally closes, asks one member. Williams notes it down. Someone says that everyone should get severance pay whenever they leave — it's a credit for past loyalty and long service.

What are the ground rules for transfers to Surrey? The interviews start next week. It seems likely only the highly skilled will be taken.

What happens to Local 1947? The certification address should be changed.

The contract expires next November. Williams, who doesn't expect to go to Surrey, says negotiations should go ahead as normal. The bylaws will need changing, he adds.

"Where are people going to get jobs at $4 and $5 an hour in this town?" No one knows.

"You have a fairly good wage scale down there compared with the tourist industry in town," says Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan.

He says it is a "tragic situation," a familiar one in Ontario and Quebec, "the uprooting of people's lives."

Some Bapco men will lose half their pay by accepting new jobs in Victoria, says one member.

"All there is in this town is low paid unskilled jobs. Ninety people have got to get new jobs. If 25 find jobs in this town this time next year they'll be lucky."

What happens to the pension plan? The employees can get their contributions back plus three per cent, or leave it in and draw it out at 65, says Williams.

More questions. About MSA and group insurance. Does Bapco seniority in Victoria transfer to Bapco in Vancouver. All the questions are noted. The company will be asked. The members will be told.

It is apparent there is a good relationship between local workers and local managers. Bapco president J. R. Law is always called "Bob Law." Never "Mr. Law." But plant shutdowns aren't decided at this level.

"Some guy in an ivory tower in Montreal has the power of life or death over my job here. We're going to have to fight the corporations on a global basis."

Someone mentions that unions are talking of a global strike against Dunlop. The parallel with paintmaking is drawn immediately. Bapco is owned by Canadian Industries Limited. CIL is owned by Imperial Chemical Industries, the giant British company.

A corporate rationalization has been made far away, and no one in Victoria can do anything about it. Unions must think globally, the meeting is told.

Larry Ryan worries about the decline of secondary industry in Victoria. Where will be the jobs for tomorrow's workers?

"The same logic that moves Bapco to Vancouver would move industry from British Columbia to Ontario," he says. Again the theme — world-wide measures by unions to confront multi-national corporations.

The mood of the meeting is serious, but not one of despair. The corporate economic realities are perceived. The bread and butter questions are raised. The union will do what it can.

There is even humor, or perhaps pathos. The annual Christmas party will be held this Saturday. The local votes $100 towards the cost, and someone cracks: "It's being referred to as the last supper."

Extravagant, Exuberant Era Ends

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — A new, less-glamorous era in space exploration begins in 1973, with the current Apollo 17 mission marking the end of the American moon-landing extravaganzas for at least a decade.

The coming year will see the United States, all tight-pursed and practical, return its sights to the earth's environs after an extravagant, exuberant decade when most of the money and attention went to lunar exploration.

James C. Fletcher, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, summarized the dry new approach: "We have turned from a period of space exploration to a period of space exploitation for practical purposes."

Faced with increasing reluctance on the part of Congress and the White House to finance costly adventures with few immediate benefits, NASA has had to cut its budget and stress projects which have visible returns.

Skylab will test man's capacities for long-duration space flight. Combined with other satellite programs, the huge Skylab machine will feed back data on the earth's atmosphere, report on crops and timber growth and produce more detailed maps of land and water.

END OF ERA

Such practical work, extending programs which have been given increasing stress in these pinch-penny days, marks a deliberate turning away from the pioneering glamor of the Apollo series.

The year now drawing to a close, with its two Apollo moon shots and its Mariner IX exploration of Mars as highlights, will probably come to be regarded as both a high-water year and the end of an historic age.

The present Apollo 17 flight was preceded by that of Apollo 16 last April, in which flight commander John Young and his crew, Charles Duke and Thomas Mattingly, brought back 245 pounds of moon rock after a 20-hour exploration of the dazzling Descartes Mountains region of the moon.

The most detailed mapping of Mars ever carried out was provided this year by Mariner IX, which circled the planet for 349 days before its equipment gave out Oct. 27. The satellite sent back more than 7,300 photos of the Red Planet, drastically altering scientific theories of Mars's history, climate and topography.

The past year also saw an important step for Canada in space technology with the orbiting Nov. 9 of Anik I, a 600-pound communications satellite which will provide radio, TV and telephone links for northern Canada as part of its functions.

The Soviet Union had a relatively unadventurous year in space.

REACHES VENUS

The Luna XX mission ended last Feb. 25 when an unmanned space craft returned safely to Soviet soil with several ounces of moon rock gathered from the previously unexplored lunar highlands during an 11-day mission that included 27½ hours for a robot rocket on the moon's surface.

There was also the mission of Venus VIII, which parachuted through the dense provided this year by Mariner clouds and crushing atmosphere of Venus to make a soft landing July 22 on the planet's surface.

Its radio transmitted data for 50 minutes before the machine burned up. Russian scientists reported later that the transmissions revealed some sunlight penetrates the Venus cloud cover.

The coming year will see the climax of one of the most ambitious U.S. space projects —the Pioneer X mission to the outer reaches of the solar system.

Launched in 1971, the 570-pound space craft had reached the half-way point last Oct. 30 on its 620-million-mile journey to Jupiter.

Periodic reports sent back by the craft provided new evidence about the rock- and dust-strewn asteroid belt—damage to the vehicle was less than expected—and Pioneer X is expected to pass within 80,000 miles of Jupiter next December, relaying photos back from that huge and first joint training of Soviet and American astronauts for a co-operative Apollo-Soyuz flight in 1975. The joint venture was approved during President Nixon's visit to Moscow last May.

This year will also see the distant planet.

READERS HELP DELIVER GIFT

Times readers have enabled the mailman to come through again.

Last week the Victoria post office reported it had a parcel which had lost its address label but staff were able to see presents for "Jerry," "Barbara" and "Kevin" inside. The gifts came from "Aunt Klea" of Ogden, Utah.

Mrs. Barbara Mordaunt of 1884 San Juan told the Times Tuesday that eight people had phoned the family after spotting the story in Saturday's Times.

By ARNIE HAKALA

TORONTO (CP) — If you suffer the miseries of motion sickness, you're in good company.

Lawrence of Arabia got sick when he bumped across the desert on his camel; Lord Nelson got sick when his ship rolled and pitched on the Atlantic; and Julius Caesar got a tummy ache when thundering along on his chariot.

"Another famous case," says physiologist Dr. K. E. Money, "was naturalist Charles Darwin.

"Apparently, he got so seasick that he got off his boat at every chance he could."

Motion sickness plagues mankind in airplanes, boats, automobiles, and swings and on other moving objects such as camels, elephants and roller coaster rides.

Dr. Money, who works for the defence research board of the defence and civil institute of environmental medicine in Toronto, said scientists are making some progress on the subject but they still are puzzled.

ASTRONAUT SICK

Dr. Money who has studied the problem with world authorities on the subject, said in an interview a good contemporary example was a Russian cosmonaut who vomited all over his capsule.

"At one point, he said he felt so bad that he thought he was going to die."

The most frequent signs and symptoms of motion sickness are pallor, cold sweating, nausea and vomiting.

Some persons are so seriously afflicted that they get sick by just looking at a ship, a phenomenon Dr. Money described as a conditioned reflex.

Dr. Money said scientists are missing a link in the chain of cause and effects and that there probably is a chemical within the body that, if isolated as the missing link, might lead to rapid discoveries and treatment procedures.

Some interesting discoveries have been made: For example, women are more susceptible than men and the rate of motion sickness is 25 times higher on ships than on airplanes.

Dr. Money said commercial drugs are reliable but also offered advice for those who suffer from the sickness.

For those who get sick in cars, he suggests that they keep a steady eye on the horizon because the visual stability appears to help the sufferer.

"It is simply folklore to believe that static electricity from an automobile's tires causes motion sickness and that a chain dangling from the rear bumper will solve the problem."

For those who get seasick, Dr. Money suggested they watch the distant horizon while on deck. If below deck, they should lie down, close their eyes and think of anything else but getting sick.

"If you are able to talk to someone below deck while lying down, that usually helps."

He also said that those who get sick while flying should try to look at the horizon and make sure that they use the head rest so that the head does not move too much.

Dr. Money's department gives instructions about motion sickness to medical officers in flight surgeons' courses; gives advice concerning motion sickness to people planning new vehicles or an alteration of an old one; investigates those military air-crew trainees who develop a serious motion sickness problem; and predicts whether adaptation will ultimately occur or whether the problem will persist indefinitely.

"Motion sickness simply shouldn't happen," he said. "It's considered weird.

"A lot of people laugh at people who get motion sick but it's no laughing matter.

Benchwarmer Fined $100 in Bruin-Buffalo Brawl

BUFFALO (AP) — Butch Deadmarsh of Buffalo Sabres never got into the National Hockey League game against Boston Bruins but he still got socked for a $100 game misconduct penalty.

This hockey rarity occurred at the tailend of Buffalo's 7-3 victory over Bruins Wednesday night as the Sabres kept intact their record of not having lost on home ice this season. The streak now is at 16, 13 victories and three ties.

With 90 seconds left and Buffalo's victory assured, the Boston players rushed the Buffalo bench. The melee, climax of a fight-filled game, resulted in penalties to three players from each team. In addition to Deadmarsh, Larry Hillman of Buffalo and Boston's Bobby Orr and Terry O'Reilly were slapped with misconducts.

Orr, the Bruins' captain who led the rush on the Sabres' bench, said "they were grabbing my players from the bench so I went."

Boston coach Tom Johnson said "they were looking for trouble from the start."

"One guy was going after everybody." Johnson didn't name the player, but left no doubt he referred to Jim Schoenfeld, Buffalo's 20-year-oll rookie defenceman.

"The fights all were in retaliation," commented Schoenfeld. "You don't pick on guys like Bobby Orr, Wayne Cashman and Carol Vadnais. That would be stupid to go looking for fights with them."

Gerry Meehan, Buffalo's captain, said the Bruins were accusing Schoenfeld while they were all going after him.

"I think it was just a rough hockey game," said the Sabres' coach Joe Crozier. He added that Frank Udvari, supervisor of NHL officials was at the game. "He has a film of the episode and will study it for any possible future action," Crozier said.

Soviet Club On Target

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Using almost machine-gun accuracy, Moscow Selects registered an 8-2 victory over the reinforced Kitchener Rangers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series in an exhibition game Wednesday night before 4,088 fans.

The Selects have three wins and a tie in their four games so far. They continue their exhibition tour with a contest in Thunder Bay Friday night. Other Ontario games are scheduled for Sudbury, London and Toronto.

The Moscow club shared its eight goals among eight players: Eugeny Kazachkin, Vladimir Popov, Sergey, Kapustin, Alexander Golikov, Alexander Martynyk, Alexander Lobanov, Nikolay Shorin and Viktor Shalimir.

Dennis Ververgaert, on loan from the OHA Junior A London Knights, counted both Kitchener goals, one in the first period, the other in the second.

The Selects blasted 47 shots at the Kitchener net where Bob Blanchet and Rick Lemay shared duties. Selects goalie Viktor Krivolapov faced 18 Ranger shots.

Moscow moved to a 4-1 lead in the first period, had it reduced to 5-2 in the second, then fired three unanswered goals in the third.

Following the game, Andrev Starovoitov, head of the Soviet Union's Ice Hockey Federation, said the second period provided the best hockey of the Selects tour so far. In it, each team scored once although the Selects outshot Kitchener 15-9.

Always Tough on Home Ice, Bombers Now Bears on Road

Times News Services

Flin Flon Bombers always have enjoyed a homer reputation. Even in years that coach Patty Ginnell has presented mediocre teams, the Bombers consistently enjoyed great success on home ice.

There may be a variance in the 1972-73 Western Canada Junior Hockey League season. Still obstinant at home, the Bombers are turning out to be bears on the road.

Flin Flon checked in with its fourth straight road success Wednesday night in Swift Current by humiliating the Broncos 9-1.

In Wednesday's only other action, Calgary Centennials came from behind three times with three power-play goals to salvage a 3-3 tie with visiting New Westminster, a decision that lifted Bruins into a share of first place in the Western Division.

Flin Flon launched its current nine-game road trip by tying the Blades 3-3 in Saskatoon. The Bombers dropped a 6-2 verdict to New Westminster but then reeled off four straight while scoring 26 goals and allowing only five.

Much of Flin Flon's success can be credited to winger Blaine Stoughton.

Stoughton banged in three goals against Swift Current to boost his goals total to 28. A second all-star team choice last season, Stoughton has scored nine goals in his last five games, eight in the past three.

Locemate Wayne Blanchin also scored three times for the Bombers who complete their road swing with games in Regina, Brandon and Winnipeg.

Victoria Cougars, edged 4-2 by Flin Flon last Sunday, return to action tonight by facing the Bruins in New Westminster.

FORWARD SPARKLES IN GOAL

Forward Dave Robinson, pressed into service as Bellingham Blazers' netminder because of an injury, stopped 32 shots and allowed only two goals, but the Blazers lost 4-3 to Vancouver Villas in British Columbia Junior Hockey League action Wednesday night.

At Vancouver, Blazers' starting goalie Doug Sauter was injured at 17:42 of the first period in a goalmouth collison with Terry Macdonald of the Villas.

Robinson, already in the game as a forward, donned the pads and kept things close while Bellingham battled back to tie the count only to have Macdonald score the winner at 10:40 of the third.

SHOOTING STARS ON THE MARKET

TORONTO (CP) — Owners of Toronto Shooting Stars have announced they are putting the National Lacrosse League franchise up for sale.

Ray Torresan, Shooting Stars president, said that the decision to abandon the team was made because of the withdrawal of the Windsor franchise and the "inability of the league to undertake a formula for planned growth into true professional status."

Other members in the eastern section of the NLL are Peterborough and Brantford. They played a partial interlocking schedule last season with Victoria, Vancouver, Coquitlam and New Westminster teams from the western section.

Torresan said he understood the Ontario Lacrosse Association planned to continue operation of the National League Eastern Division next season.

"Our franchise will be returned to the OLA to be made available to another franchise holder at a nominal cost."

NEW BOXLA BOSS NAMED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Colin Cruickshank of Burnaby, will succeed Tom English as commissioner of the Western Lacrosse Association, WLA directors announced Wednesday.

English stepped down in October after serving five one-year terms as WLA commissioner.

Cruickshank, 43 was active in Burnaby soccer leagues before serving as commissioner of the Inter-City Junior A Lacrosse league, now the Pacific Junior League, in the 1967, 1968 and 1969 seasons. He was president of the Vancouver Burrards of the WLA for the last three seasons.

Sabres Making Imlach Oracle

By The Canadian Press

Soon after Buffalo Sabres joined the National Hockey League, Punch Imlach was reported to have boasted his club would become the first expansion team to win the Stanley Cup.

Imlach apparently did not set a time limit, but if the Buffalo team he had a personal hand in building continues to improve, it might be sooner than even Imlach thinks.

The Sabres Wednesday night stretched their unbeaten streak at home to 16 games by rallying to defeat Stanley Cup champions Boston Bruins 7-3 in a brawling game.

With the win, the Sabres ended Boston's 12-game unbeaten streak during which the Bruins won five in a row.

In other games Wednesday night, Pittsburgh Penguins bombarded New York Islanders' goal as they rolled to a 9-1 victory; New York Rangers scored in the final minute of play to beat Toronto Maple Leafs 4-3; Atlanta Flames shut out Detroit Red Wings 2-0; Minnesota North Stars downed Philadelphia Flyers 7-2; Montreal Canadiens and California Golden Seals played to a 2-2 tie and Los Angeles Kings beat Chicago Black Hawks 3-1.

In games tonight, the Rangers are at Boston and St. Louis Blues play in Philadelphia.

Imlach, who won four Stanley Cups and a league championship for Toronto after building the Leafs from a last-place team in 1958, took on the challenge of ushering the Sabres into the NHL in the 1970-71 season after he was fired by the Leafs.

As general manager-coach, he built the Buffalo franchise from scratch—there was no farm team—but through judicious use of the draft and trades he is gradually turning the Sabres into a contender in the NHL.

Although he has relinquished the coaching job to friend Joe Crozier, the players Imlach had a hand in selecting are keeping the Sabres in step with Montreal, New York and Boston, the recognized power teams in the NHL's East Division.

One of those players, Gil Perreault, Imlach's first draft pick in 1970, scored two goals Wednesday night in sparking the Sabres to their win over Boston.

Perreault's goals were his 13th and 14th of the season. His first, at 5:51 of the second period, gave Buffalo a 4-2 lead after the Bruins had taken a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Ken Hodge and Don Marcotte.

After Larry Hillman and Craig Ramsay scored in the first period to tie the score, Gerry Meehan and Perreault scored early in the second period to put Buffalo ahead for the rest of the game which was interrupted four times by fights.

The last fight, 1½ minutes from the end of the game, involved players of both clubs after the Bruins rushed off their bench to the Sabres' bench. As a result, Boston's Bobby Orr and Terry O'Reilly and Buffalo's Hillman and Butch Deadmarsh were given game misconducts.

The Penguins fired 55 shots at the Islanders' goal as Syl Apps recorded the first three-goal game of his NHL career. He also assisted on three others to set a team record of six points in one game.

Bill Fairbairn's 15th goal in the last minute of play gave New York its victory over Toronto but general manager-coach Emile Francis was a worried man.

Francis, awaiting a preliminary report on an injury to centre Walt Tkaczuk, said: "We just can't afford another injury. With (Brad) Park, (Jim) Neilson, (Dale) Rolfe and (Steve) Vickers out, this would kill us."

Tkaczuk left the ice complaining of a twisted back after a collision with Rick Kehoe of the Leafs late in the game.

The Leafs rallied from a 3-0 deficit, scoring two goals in the second period and one in the third to tie the game but Fairbairn's goal late in the third period ended their comeback hopes.

McLellan said he had to replace goalie Jacques Plante at the last minute when the veteran netminder suffered a shinbone injury during the pre-game warmup.

Dryden also lost $200 in the theft in a San Francisco hotel Tuesday night.

Volleyball Tour Off

OTTAWA (CP) — A planned tour of British Columbia by the men's and women's South Korean volleyball teams was cancelled Wednesday night after it became impossible to fly the squads to Vancouver from Los Angeles.

The Koreans are touring the U.S. and had been scheduled to play three exhibitions in B.C., including one in Nanaimo, Dec. 17, 18 and 19. But due to a misunderstanding, the tour has been cancelled.

An official of the Canadian Volleyball Association said Wednesday it had been thought the club teams would pay their own way to Canada and arrange their own transportation.

It turned out, however, that they expected the association to foot the bill and by the time officials sought commercial flight space from Los Angeles to Vancouver, all flights were booked.

The teams earlier cancelled a tour of Alberta because the Alberta Association refused to help defray the costs.

Sheehan Boosts Raiders' Cause

By The Canadian Press

Bobby Sheehan was one of the many young players California Golden Seals was hoping would make them contenders in the National Hockey League—that is until the World Hockey Association became a fact.

Sheehan, who scored 20 goals and assisted on 26 last season for California in the NHL, jumped to New York Raiders of the WHA this year and is doing for them exactly what he did for the Seals last season—scoring goals.

He scored three Wednesday night in leading the Raiders to a 9-1 romp of Quebec Les Nordiques in WHA action. The goals gave him a total of 20 for the season.

In other games, Philadelphia Blazers scored four goals in the third period to defeat Winnipeg Jets 7-4, Chicago Cougars downed New England Whalers 6-3 and Alberta Oilers beat Houston Aeros 3-2.

Wednesday night, Sheehan combined with another former California player, Norm Ferguson, to trample Les Nordiques as they both figured in four goals.

Ferguson and Sheehan each picked up a goal and two assists in the first period in which the Raiders scored five goals. Sheehan then scored twice early in the third period, both on power plays.

"I was lucky for a change," Sheehan said of his three goals. "I was trying to pass on my first goal and it went in. I needed a cheap one to get me going."

FLO MANNS CAPTURES PIN AWARD

Flo Manns improved with each game and wound up as winner of the women's tenpin award in the 10th week of the 10th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition.

Flo topped rivals in the distaff tenpin division as she rolled games of 167, 189 and 211 for a series of 567 in the Sunday Nighters League at Mayfair Lanes.

Play in the 11th week of the contest, which involves bowlers competing in leagues on southern Vancouver Island lanes, ends Friday night for a two-week holiday break. Pinspillers will resume the chase for weekly awards on Dec. 30.

Maki Remains in Fair Condition

NEW WESTMINSTER, (CP) — A spokesman for Vancouver Canucks of the Narional Hockey League reported Wednesday that left-winger Wayne Maki "is resting in the intensive care unit at Royal Columbian hospital and the hospital staff lists his condition as fair" following a four-hour emergency operation Sunday for removal of a brain tumor.

"His brother, Chico, visited last night and Wayne is conscious," said Greg Douglas, public relations officer for the Canucks.

Wayne Maki was sent back to Vancouver from Atlanta after he complained of constant headaches during the team's latest road trip to Atlanta, Toronto and Detroit. He was admitted to hospital Saturday for observation and underwent surgery Sunday.

The Canucks acquired the scrappy leftwinger from St. Louis Blues in the 1970 expansion draft. He was one of the Canucks' leading scorers in the club's rookie 1970-71 season with 25 goals and 38 assists. Maki had 22 goals and 25 assists last season and three goals and 10 assists in 25 games this season.

Two other athletes also are recovering from operations.

Now Is the Time to Start Chasing Island Steelhead

"One on! One on!"

Thus rings the cry of the successful Vancouver Island steelhead angler. It is a booming sound of triumph and elation, muffled by rushing river water but still spine-tingling as it floats on the elements of a coastal winter.

To the initiated, it means a rapid line retrieve, for who knows what may suddenly appear from around the bend where the cry rang out? It can be guaranteed that when the cry sounds there will not be more than a fifty-fifty chance that the fish will be beached. Such is the power of the magnificent steelhead trout. More often, the escape ratio is higher.

Now is that season and the time for action!

For the uninitiated, here are ten tips for steelhead success:

—Concentrate your angling effort to one well-known steelhead stream during your first season. Choose a smaller stream. Its conditions are a miniaturized mirror of larger rivers and that much easier to learn. Observe other anglers and study the streamside trails to learn the major steelhead holding pools. Learn these thoroughly, in particular the specific areas in the pool where the fish are hooked. These lies are small, very definite and usually won't alter during a season.

—Fish your stream early, recognizing that there are only so many catchable steelhead in the river and they are on a first-come basis. Steelhead usually travel at night but will move on cloudy days or stormy days particularly if the river begins to show some color from storm run-off.

—When float fishing, should the float submerge or move unnaturally at any place in the pool—strike! If while drift fishing there is the slightest bump or hesitation on the line—strike! This is the steelheaders' cardinal rule.

—Spend at least 90 per cent of your time fishing the pools, but also fish the runs under banks, off the ends of logs,or under overhanging bush. In general, fish every dark green stretch of water until you have located the steelhead resting places.

—Remember at all times that the steelhead is not a feeding fish, but a migrating fish searching for a place to spawn. Don't "trout fish" at the head of pools, fish deep in the resting areas where the water flow is regular—where there is a slick to keep the water true. Bottom fishing is the second major rule for steelheaders. The successful steelheader expects to lose much tackle.

—Fish your river under all conditions—flood, low water, colored, stormy day, sunny day — to learn its unique variables, for holding steelhead and angling techniques.

—When the water is high and murky, fish the lower ends of pools and runs. Conversely, when water is low and clear, fish the tops of pools. When they are resting, steelhead seek areas where they feel safe and sheltered. In low water the lower end of a pool is often too open and they tend to move up under the dip at the head end for security. In high water they seek a place where light still filters through and where the current flows evenly. This is at the tailrace of a pool.

—Use one lure constantly — learning to fish it effectively and under all water conditions. Start with the recognized successful lures — the gooey bob, the spin and glow, roe and garden hackles.

—Check your equipment often and thoroughly. Retie knots, throw away frayed or nicked line, sharpen your hooks, etc., etc., etc.

—Finally — keep your tackle in the water — fishing! Have spare tackle and hook-ups ready before you reach the river. These should be readily available at the moment you need them.

Now Hagge Joining Courtroom Brigade

DALLAS (AP) — A $500,000 slander suit filed by Marlene Hagge against fellow golfer Sandra Palmer will be heard in district court here March 5.

Miss Hagge, of Sarasota, Fla., charges in the suit filed Sept. 20 that Miss Palmer said she lied in an affidavit filed earlier in an Atlanta court.

The affidavit was one of several filed by members of the Ladies Professional Golf Association in connection with a $2 million anti-trust suit filed by Jane Blalock.

Miss Blalock, leading LPGA money-winner in 1971, her rookie season, was suspended by the organization for one year last May on charges of cheating, specifically improving the lie of her ball on the green.

Miss Blalock went to court in Atlanta, headquarters of the LPGA, and was granted a temporary injunction against the suspension pending a jury trial expected next month.

JANE BLALOCK
. . . created furore

Miss Blalock contends that fellow golfers conspired to remove her from competition to improve their chances of winning a larger share of tournament prize money.

Miss Hagge charges in the Dallas suit that on July 8 Miss Palmer was quoted in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin as saying that one of the golfers lied in an affidavit. She further charged that Miss Palmer subsequently told another golfer, Jo Ann Prentice, that she was referring to Miss Hagge.

Miss Hagge's petition claims Miss Palmer's statement was "wanton, wilful and malicious" with intent to "intentionally harm the reputation and character of the plaintiff."

Valentine Rink Tops Servicemen

Doug Valentine's rink shrugged off an early loss and went on to capture the CFB Esquimalt curling championship Wednesday at Esquimalt Curling Club.

Jim Fennell's foursome knocked Valentine and his crew of Greg Smith, Dave Kirkwood and Vic Auburn from the unbeaten ranks in the three-day, double-loss elimination tournament with an early 8-6 decision.

Later, Valentine's rink douwned Fennell's quartet, which included Ken Wardell, Bill Short and Don Graham, 10-8, in an extra-end final.

Victory earned Valentine a berth in the Pacific regional zone playdowns Jan. 8-12 in Chilliwack. The winner of the zone championship advances to the Canadian Forces championship at CFB Shilo, Manitoba, Feb. 12-17.

A GIFT OF LOVE

Birthstone and Diamond Ring

These are genuine gemstones . . . made by Nature, not synthesized by man.

The setting is a pretty flower shape. Its centre, a glowing birthstone (choose from twelve, one for each month). Its "petals", six sparkling diamonds.

Chicago's Wirtz Largest Shareholder in Medicor

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun says Arthur Wirtz, owner of the National Hockey League Chicago Black Hawks, is the largest single shareholder in Medical Investment Corp. Ltd. of Minneapolis, (Medicor) which controls the Vancouver Canucks of the NHL.

The evening newspaper says in a story from Minneapolis that Wirtz is regarded under United States securities law as having control of Medicor, which has a 60-per-cent holding in Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd., immediate parent company of the Canucks.

Documents filed with the U.S. Securities Exchange Commission and in a Minneapolis civil court action show that Wirtz bought 400,000 shares in Medicor on Sept. 30, 1971, representing 31.6 per cent of the issued common stock of the company, says The Sun.

The newspaper says the documents show that he paid 75 cents a share for a total of $300,000, and records show that market price at that time was in the $5.50 to $7 range.

Tom Scallen, president of both Medicor and Northwest, was previously the largest single Medicor shareholder and was regarded as having control. Scallen was not available for comment Wednesday.

The issuing of previously undistributed Medicor stock to Wirtz meant that Scallen's 189,355 shares constituted about 15 per cent of the company's stock rather than about 23 per cent as was the case before the issue, says The Sun.

NHL president Clarence Campbell, asked in Montreal for comment, said he knew about the transaction: "It was not a share deal, it was a loan deal."

The purpose was to prevent another group foreclosing on notes in an attempt to gain control of a Medicor-owned ice show, he said.

There is nothing secret about the deal, Campbell said. "The league is satisfied as to the purpose and they know all about it."

The Sun says agreement under which Wirtz bought the 400,000 shares says in part that no pre-emptive rights exist in favor of any shareholder and shareholders, and that the stock is fully-paid, non-assessable, and has voting rights on a parity with all other common stock previously issued by Medicor, and makes no mention of any loan provisions.

Last week Scallen denied a Toronto newspaper report that the Canucks now are controlled by the Black Hawks.

He said the club is not controlled by any outside interests and denied that the Black Hawks hold shares as collateral for a loan.

"We borrow money from Wirtz from time to time and we always pay it back," he said then. "We have just completed refinancing and the team is not for sale."

The court case in which the Wirtz share acquisition is referred to is a suit by Minneapolis businessman Morris Chalfen alleging that Medicor is in default on convertible notes worth more than $4 million which he holds.

Colquitz Takes Volleyball Title

Colquitz marched through a double round-robin tournament in undefeated fashion at S. J. Willis Junior High School to capture the Victoria with a total of nine points.

Cedar Hill earned six points to finish second in the four-team event. Oak Bay was third with three and last place Arbutus scored one point.

Pads Eye Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The increasing possibility" of the San Diego Padres baseball franchise being shifted to Washington is reaching the critical discussion stage, The Evening Star-News reported Wednesday.

It will involve the question of what the U.S. capital can offer in terms of a stadium lease, The Star-News said.

Padres president Buzzie Bavasi, complaining no one in authority for the Washington government has made him a rental offer, will have one spelled out for him Friday in a meeting with commissioner Bowie Kuhn in New York, the newspaper said.

"I don't think we will have any trouble with the lease," said Bavasi, who is leaning more and more toward shifting to Washington, The Star-News said.

It added that Bavasi's unexpected meeting with Kuhn while San Diego municipal officials are still preparing to meet with him again to try to resolve Padres' problems there, strongly endorses Bavasi's reaction that he is "resigned to the possibility that we could open the 1973 season in Washington."

Meet a Proud Canadian.

We're proud, because in a recent taste test Canadian Rye drinkers chose Corby Royal Reserve over one of Canada's most famous premium-priced whiskies!

It all started when we asked a panel of 150 regular Canadian rye drinkers—people with tastes like yours—to sample two brands, our Royal Reserve and a famous premium-priced Canadian.

Results? Our Royal Reserve was preferred by 58% of the panelists over the premium-priced brand.

Next time you're buying, try the Proud Canadian. We think you'll find its character and quality make it one of the finest ryes you've ever enjoyed. (And we know you'll find its price an equally pleasant surprise!)

A-G Probes Nurse's 'Abduction'

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The attorney-general's department said Wednesday it will investigate charges by a Woodlands School psychiatric nurse that she was abducted from her job at the school Nov. 3 and taken to a private sanatorium against her will.

Department lawyer Bob Adamson said he has been instructed to take statements from school personnel named in nurse Marie White's allegations. He will also meet with Mrs. White's lawyer, Norman Einarson.

"If the inquiry indicates anything untoward happened to Mrs. White at the Woodlands School, this department will take the appropriate action," Adamson said in an interview from Victoria.

Mrs. White was head nurse in the isolation ward of the school for disturbed children.

The alleged abduction took place Nov. 3 while she was working in the ward and followed a complaint she had made about the lack of control over drugs being used in the school, Mrs. White said.

She said she had complained that drugs being used in the hospital wing of the school were being overstocked with no record being kept of how they were being used or of the quantities involved.

Mrs. White said a few hours after she'd made her complaint, she was asked to meet with a doctor and was taken to a room in the Fraserview building where she worked. Two members of the Woodlands executive staff and a doctor she had never seen before were waiting for her.

"He was introduced to me. He chatted to me for a few moments, but did not give me a medical or a psychiatric examination. Afterwards, I returned to the isolation ward," Mrs. White said.

Later that day, she was told by a member of the Woolands executive that she was "unwell" and required immediate treatment. Mrs. White alleged she was then taken to see the doctor she had seen earlier and told she was to be taken to the Hollywood Sanitorium for treatment immediately.

Saanich DOH Eyes New Home

New accommodation for part of its district administration in Saanich is planned by the provincial highways department at Royal Oak.

The department has asked Saanich council to rezone land at the northeast corner of Royal Oak Drive and Pipeline from rural-residential to commercial-office use.

Parts of two lots are required for a building to house some 20 persons employed at present in the department's Burnside Road maintenance and equipment storage yard. Later it is planned to move the storage yard itself to a Central Saanich location.

They are residual portions from land acquired originally for realignment of Patricia Bay Highway and connecting roads.

Saanich was expected to deal with the re-zoning application before the end of the year.

A New Term On Cyprus

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The Security Council has voted to extend the term of the United Nations peacekeeping force in Cyrpus for another six months.

The force was first set up in 1964 in the wake of fighting between Greek-and Turkish-Cypriots and has been extended at regular periods ever since.

The military force on the island now comprises 2,981 troops supplied by Canada, Australia, Denmark, Finland, Ireland, Sweden and Britain.

Magic Lake Sewers 'Good'

The sewerage system at Magic Lake Estates Limited on North Pender Island is a good one, managing director Jim King of Vancouver said Wednesday.

He told a meeting of the Capital Regional District board the system is properly installed, and while it is not finished, the developers were prepared to do this.

King said he was "concerned" at newspaper reports of regional district engineer Bill Gerry's comments at last week's local works and services committee.

Gerry, in a report, said the sewerage system was "extremely poorly constructed" and the list of deficiencies ran to three typewritten pages.

He recommended that the regional district not take over the Magic Lake sewerage system and gave an opinion that a local improvement district should be supported.

This position was endorsed by the board Wednesday, which also heard from King that Magic Lake Estates is not opposed to a local improvement district.

Saanich Seeks More Sand For Elk-Beaver Beaches

Saanich wants the Capital Regional District to boost expenditures to extend beaches in Elk-Beaver Lake Regional Park.

In a letter, Mayor Hugh Curtis, who is also regional district chairman, said that on fine summer days there are more than 10,000 persons daily at the three main beaches.

Beaver Lake is the most crowded, he said, with 6,000 daily, followed by Hamsterley (2,500) and Eagle (1,500).

"There has been no significant extension for many years and yet there has been rapid population growth and resultant increased use of these recreational areas," he said.

The regional board, at Wednesday's meeting, referred the letter to the parks committee.

Job Need Reviewed

The Capital Regional District board decided Wednesday to take a second look at its proposal to seek a new information officer.

The board had decided, at its November meeting, to advertise for applicants on a full-time or part-time basis to succeed Jim Hume, who resigned. Full-time salary was advertised as $13,200 a year.

Victoria Ald. Clyde Savage said he couldn't see any need to pay someone $13,200 a year "to liaise with the media" and charged that two men would be filling Hume's shoes because a new board secretary already had been hired.

Executive director Dennis Young said there was no increase in total staff involved, simply a redistribution.

The board agreed to reconsider the whole thing at its meeting in January.

Madonna Recovered

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — A Raphael Madonna and Child valued at $1.2 million has been recovered two years after it was stolen from a Beverly Hills home, police said Wednesday.

Police said they arrested three men trying to sell it to an art dealer Tuesday.

Raphael is believed to have painted the work about 1500.

STUDY SET ON PUBLIC TRANSIT

A special committee to study public transit will be formed by the Capital Regional District, the regional board agreed Wednesday.

The move was proposed by Victoria Ald. Clyde Savage, who said that while transit and transportation is one part of a new regional plan, the district should not wait until the spring to start discussions for "a transit takeover in this area."

He noted that the provincial government "has clearly taken the initiative in advocating improvements" and the Greater Vancouver Regional District has started discussions.

DIRECTOR TOLD 'SHUT UP'

The words were thrown by Victoria Ald. Tom Christie at Saanich Ald. William Noel.

After Christie had asked a number of questions about the district's $2.4 million provisional budget for 1973, and he was told several times it was a Municipal Act requirement until the budget proper is considered in detail in the spring, Noel said "let's get on with the business."

"Oh shut up," snapped Christie.

When Chistie was told that the procedure in adopting a provisional budget is a requirement of the law, and done in municipalities as well as regional districts, the alderman said he knew that but the procedure should be changed.

"Why not bring up a resolution for the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities and the Union of B.C. Municipalities," suggested acting board chairman Archiblald Galbraith.

"Why should I," said Christie.

"Because you brought it up," said Galbraith.

"We have an executive director. Let him do it," said Christie.

The budget was finally approved, and will be considered in detail in the spring when directors can move to amend it.

UIC Move Delayed

The Victoria office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission will not be moving to its new location in the Bank of Commerce Building until Jan. 15.

The office had posted a sign telling UIC clients the move would be on Dec. 18 but a delay in the delivery of furnishings has forced postponement of the move until the new year.

BENNETT MISLED, SAYS BARRETT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett said Wednesday Opposition Leader W. A. C. Bennett was misled by a "completely erroneous" Ottawa report into thinking there was disagreement between the premier's statements and those of Prime Minister Trudeau over reopening of the Columbia River Treaty with the United States.

Earlier Wednesday Bennett had accused Barrett of giving the public the "wrong impression" about his meeting Monday in Ottawa with Trudeau when the premier said Ottawa was willing to consider a request to reopen negotiations with the U.S. over the treaty.

Said Barrett:

"There is no conflict in our statements, none whatsoever. The leader of the opposition has been misled, it's unfortunate but he was asked to comment on a news story that was erroneous and has already been corrected and unfortunately he was not informed that the story was incorrect. I don't fault Bennett on this."

Barrett said that after coming out of treasury he was approached by radio newsmen and listened to a tape of the prime minister's statements Wednesday and was in "complete agreement" with them.

Bennett, he said, had been asked to comment on a report of the prime minister's statements that was at variance with the tape recording.

"The prime minister's statement's concur exactly with my statements," said the NDP leader.

Barrett said B.C. government will prepare a brief to be submitted in six weeks to Ottawa with a view to establishing a liason committee as provided under a B.C.-Ottawa aggreement on the treaty to discuss renegotiation.

PM DENIES DISPUTE WITH QUEEN

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Trudeau today denied published reports that Canada has become involved in a dispute with Buckingham Palace over attempts to upgrade the standing of the governor-general.

According to the reports published Wednesday and again today, Queen Elizabeth has rejected a suggestion by the Canadian government that letters of credence for Canadian diplomats be signed by the governor-general rather than by herself personally.

When confronted with a direct question today as to whether a dispute as such existed, Trudeau said, "No, it (the report) is not accurate."

But he added later that there was a discussion over the interpretation of Letters Patent issued in 1947 that permit the governor-general "to exercise certain Royal perogatives."

The prime minister refused to confirm or deny reports that there had been correspondence between the Queen and himself on the subject.

"The only thing that has been going on is how these Letters of Patent should be administered. There has been no lessening of the Queen's powers," Trudeau said.

Actual upgrading of the governor-general's status began in 1969 when Governor-General Roland Michener visited four Commonwealth countries as "head of state" of Canada, quickly followed by visits to the Netherlands and Iran.

Inquest Faults Victim, Driver

A coroner's jury blamed both the driver and victim Tuesday for the death of a 72-year-old man, killed Nov. 23 while changing a tire on the Malahat four miles north of Goldstream Park.

The six-man jury investigating the death of Jones Edwards of Duncan also recommended the provincial government make provisions for testing Vancouver Island motor vehicles in districts other than Victoria.

Edwards was driving a group of Duncan-area residents to Victoria when his station wagon got a flat tire. While he was standing behind the car he was struck by a car driven by Edward Melvin Page, 19, of Koksilah, who was also driving a group of people to Victoria.

The jury ruled that the Edwards vehicle was not properly equipped for night travel and mentioned lack of tail lights in particular.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said Page had been following another vehicle too closely and Page's car had no brakes on its rear wheels.

$10,000 DAMAGE IN TROLLER FIRE

Fire gutted the galley and cabin of an unoccupied troller moored at Fisherman's Wharf in James Bay early this morning.

Damage to the 35-foot troller, Marauder King, owned by Oliver J. Powell, 3212 Kenya Pl., was unofficially estimated by Victoria fire department at $10,000.

It might have been greater, a fire department spokesman said had it not been for the swift action of crew members of the tug Gulf Dianne, who spotted the fire.

The tug's crew was already extinguishing the blaze when units from the fire department arrived at the wharf around 2 a.m. Thursday.

An electrical fault was the suspected cause of the fire.

Short Session

A board of reference investigating the dismissal of Campbell River high school principal John Young reconvened at Victoria county court this morning, but immediately adjourned until the afternoon.

The three-man board sat in Campbell River for two weeks and heard ten days of testimony. It reconvened to hear the conclusion of Campbell River school board's legal argument and rebuttal by counsel for Young.

In the meantime Campbell River electors threw out the the three school trustees up for re-election Saturday including the chairman and vice-chairman who were openly pushing for Young's departure before Young was fired Sept. 8.

Man Injured

Fane Carlsen, 655 Craigflower, is in fair condition in Victoria General Hospital today. His car was demolished when he collided with a utility pole on the east side of Hereward Road Wednesday.

Arts Professionals Get Boost

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Council is setting up a touring office to stimulate travel by Canadian performing companies here and abroad, it was announced Wednesday.

Based in Ottawa, regional centres will be established eventually in the Atlantic and Prairie regions, British Columbia, Montreal and Toronto, a council press release said.

It will be headed by an advisory board mad eup of performing arts professionals from across Canada. The National Arts Centre and external affairs department will also be represented.

The press release said the office will not control artistic content or supplant current touring arrangements of the companies or the work of commercial impresarios.

Health Hazards Listed

GENEVA (AP) — A book starting with A for "accidents, air traffic" and running to Z for "zinc" was published Wednesday by the World Health Organization. It lists hazards to human health.

Compiled from contributions by more than 100 scientists, it is to help health officials throughout the world to check "serious and sometimes irreversible damage to life on this planet," the preface says.

The 370-page book ranges from widely familiar air and water pollutants to the "yusho" oil disease that first affected about 1,000 Japanese in 1968. It is induced by the ingestion of PCB, used in plastics and other commercial products.

The book includes a detailed list of toxic effects produced by a score of metals and other chemical substances accumulated in the bodies of human consumers or animals.

Public Appeal Made For Search Funds

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — A fund was started Wednesday to raise reward money to provide incentive for a ground search for a helicopter and four men missing since Nov. 3 on a flight to Winnipeg from Thompson.

A nine-day search between Poplar River and Berens River along the east shore of Lake Winnipeg failed to turn up any trace of the missing men or aircraft. The three passengers were Thompson residents.

Lyall Walsh, a brother of one of the helicopter's passengers, appeared on a Thompson open-line radio show and appealed for public support for resumption of the air search and the start of a ground search in the area where the helicopter is believed to have gone down.

In Sioux Lookout, Ont., Walter Walsh, father of the missing passenger, said in a telephone interview "We've just been banging our heads against a concrete wall trying to get the government to start looking again."

He said his son, Gary, hunted and fished as a youth in Sioux Lookout, 240 miles northwest of Thunder Bay.

"He is well-equipped for survival. We haven't given up hope."

Banff Festival Set

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — The Banff Festival of the Arts will be a two-week program next summer which will provide at least three performances of major productions.

Co-ordinator Neil Armstrong said in a news release that the change will give more exposure to musical theatre, drama, opera, dance and orchestral music — instead of the single-exposure treatment received during the last two years.

'Hours Bank' Tried

WINNIPEG (CP) — An 18-month experimental program by Manitoba Hydro has allowed about 1,000 workers from the Manitoba Hydro Employees Association, head office, management and supervisory staff to become the first group of provincial government public service employees to use a four-day work week.

The program, involving an "hours bank" scheme, ends June 26, 1974, the same time a current contract between the company and the association expires.

Colleges Get More

EDMONTON (CP) — The legislature will be asked to approve operating grants representing a 9.1-per-cent increase to universities and a 20-per-cent increase to colleges, Advanced Education Minister Jim Foster said Wednesday.

Ugandans Find Jobs

WINNIPEG (CP) — All but two of the 100 Ugandan Asians who registered for employment in Winnipeg are working, John Mathes, a Winnipeg Manpower office spokesman, said Tuesday.

Mathes said about 65 per cent of those working hold the same type of job they had before coming to Canada and most of the jobs are in the nature of clerks. The two unemployed Ugandans in Winnipeg are middle-aged women who have never worked before, Mathes said.

9-DEATH CRASH 'DRIVER ERROR'

EDMONTON (CP) — A coroner's jury has ruled that a Sept. 17 accident near Stony Plain, Alta., which killed nine occupants of two cars, was caused by driver error.

The six-man jury, which contained two members of native origin including Chief Samuel Bird of the Glenevis Indian Reserve, ruled that the eastbound car carrying seven native persons was at fault.

"It is the opinion of the jury that the car . . . was definitely on the wrong side of the highway at the time of the accident, causing the deaths of the occupants of the vehicle."

The only survivor was Edith Marie Alexis.

Libel Appeal Decision Reserved

OTTAWA (CP) — An award of $10,000 against Mayor Rodney Sykes of Calgary was moderate considering the findings of the judge who found him guilty of defamation, the Supreme Court of Canada was told Wednesday.

The alleged libel took place at a news conference in 1969 when the mayor accused developers of a shopping mall and housing project of deception.

Lawyer Robert Fraser, who acted on behalf of the developers, took action against the mayor and was successful at trial and at the Alberta Court of Appeal.

Sykes is seeking to have the decisions overturned or to have the money award decreased.

The supreme court, after almost three days of hearing the appeal, reserved its decision.

J. H. Laycraft, appearing for Fraser, said the words used by the mayor "mislead . . . breach of faith" and others — aggravated the damage done to Fraser.

The Well-Dressed Tree . . .

THIRD SECTION family
WENDY DEY – EDITOR

The Christmas tree perfuming the living room represents a 1,200-year-old tradition — but it's an expensive tradition to observe if it's your first tree.

Newly married couples, for instance, discover that the tree they have always taken for granted in their parents' homes represents a considerable financial investment.

The trees themselves aren't too expensive, but the accessories required by novice decorators can cost anywhere from $25 to $40.

Kit and Derry McDonnell want to buy a small, live tree that will fit on their coffee table. They are University of Victoria students and can't afford to splurge on expensive lights and decorations.

Mrs. McDonnell, a fine arts student, is making papier mache bells and angels and plans to use inexpensive candles instead of electric Christmas lights.

Keeps 10 Days

A three-foot tall Norway spruce costs $6.95 at one local nursery and can be kept indoors for approximately 10 days.

The same store also has 18-inch dwarf Scotch pine for $9.95. These trees can be planted in a tub and brought into the house every Christmas. Austrian pine, four to five feet tall, are also available for $12.95 to $15.95.

Cut trees cost anywhere from $7 for a six-foot pine to $3 for an eight-foot fir. Conservationists can spare the environment and solve the problem of needles in the shag carpeting by buying an artificial tree. One local shopping plaza has artificial pines for sale at $22.98.

Artificial trees have a couple of advantages over the natural product — they don't shed and they come complete with stand.

A butter box full of bricks makes a good, inexpensive tree stand. These days, however, butter boxes are hard to find. Most people will have to settle for a metal stand ($1.98) which provides at least half an hour of utter fruatration for anyone trying to adjust the three small screws so that they hold the tree upright.

This stand has a small water container to keep the tree from drying out and becoming a fire hazard. The tree should always be set up well away from fireplaces, hot air registers or radiators.

Lights should be the first decorations added to the tree. A six-foot tree will need at least three strands of 12 lights each. Bulbs should not rest on the branches as they may become hot enough to start a fire.

Christmas lights vary in price according to the type selected. For example, a string of 15 traditional lights costs $2.79 at one shopping plaza. The same store also has strings of miniature, flashing lights for $3.99. The most expensive sets are those with flashing bulbs ($4.99 for regular size bulbs), frosted bulbs ($4.99) or added accessories such as flower-shaped reflectors ($4.95.

Tinsel and popcorn chains are usually the next items added to the tree. The B.C. Forest Service warns that tinsel decorations conduct electricity and should never be allowed to touch the lights.

Don't Eat

Tinsel strands in pink, blue, gold or silver cost $1.49 for 12 feet or $1.98 for 18 feet. A six-foot pink popcorn chain costs 99 cents and carries the warning: "Not to be eaten as candy."

Tree decorations come in a wide range of sizes, colors and prices. Hubert Hinskens, 8, is helping to decorate his family's tree by making origami stars and birds out of colored paper. Origami is the Japanese art of paper folding.

Children might also enjoy making wooden decorations for their trees. One local store has a set of punch-out wooden decorations that are easily assembled. The kit costs $3.99 and comes with six pots of fluorescent paint.

The best buy for budget watchers is a set of 24 tiny, colored glass balls for 49 cents and another set of six three-inch diameter balls in matching colors for 99 cents.

In comparison, six glass balls the same size decorated with gold braid and sequins costs $2.98.

Balls made of contrasting strips of velvet and satin are three for 70 cents. Plain satin balls cost $1.99 for 12.

Any bare spots left after the decorations have been carefully positioned can be covered with tinfoil icicles or angels' hair. Icicles are 39 cents a package, compared to 79 cents for angels' hair.

Placing the star at the top of the tree used to be the final touch, but this year traditional stars are difficult to find.

The only star available at two large department stores is made of clear plastic and has 10 flashing lights ($3.99). One shopping plaza offers a space-age chrome globe that also lights up. This decoration costs $8.99 and is big enough to weigh down any tree less than eight feet tall.

Glass tree-top decorations shaped like spires are available in a variety of colors in prices ranging from $1 to $1.99.

Best Buy

The best buy for the top of the tree locally appears to be a six-inch tall Christmas angel for sale at a downtown department store. This angel has pale blonde hair, a pleasing expression and gilt paper wings. She wears a velvet robe and costs $1.25.

If it all seems like too much trouble blame St. Boniface. He started the Christmas tree tradition during the Christianization of Germany in the eighty century.

CASH REGISTERS JINGLE-BELLING OVER TIME

Sales 'At Least' 10% Higher

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

By the time the fabled old gentleman in red completes his rooftop rounds this Christmas, cash registers across Canada will have echoed their jingling and joyous refrain.

"'Tis the season to be very," chants a Toronto sales girl emphasizing the adverb — "very free with cash or the credit you'll be paying for next June."

The Retail Council of Canada predicts department store Christmas sales will be at least 10 per cent higher than in 1971.

Various factors contribute to the easy spending, a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows. Economics and shop-window glitter play their part.

Reports of comparatively slow sales from British Columbia seem to buck the trend. A Vancouver official for Eaton's said "we're spending a lot of time trying to figure out why."

He said B.C.'s economy hasn't been very buoyant "since the strikes last summer and the trend has continued into this month."

In Newfoundland, a spokesman for Royal Stores in St. John's said shopping since mid-November has been "more than good."

Another St. John's retail outlet, Bowring Brothers Ltd., said "sales are excellent," and expected to be up by 10 per cent over last year.

Better Season

In Nova Scotia, Halifax merchants also reported a significantly better season than last year with trends to wearing apparel and home appliances, all comparatively expensive items. Personal gifts such as hair-care equipment are popular too.

Metropolitan Stores Ltd. in Halifax said inventories will be about five per cent higher this year. The Halifax store has budgeted for a 15 per cent sales increase.

R. P. Creakhan, manager of Creaghan's Ltd. in Fredericton, said business has shown "a marked improvement" over last year, with people in a good spending mood. A spokesman for Creaghan's department store in Moncton, N.B., said sales were up about 12 per cent in October and five per cent in November. The store anticipates an 11-per-cent increase for December.

A K-Mart spokesman in Charlottetown reported a "fantastic year," attributed to good potato prices in Prince Edward Island this year. Another large retail outlet expressed surprise at the big number of cash sales — "even for big ticket items."

A board of trade spokesman said the business community is pleased at the spending, in most cases up from a year ago.

With winter hitting Quebec earlier this year, shoppers went out earlier for such items as heavy clothing, many with Christmas in mind. Simpsons-Sears said October and November sales were up 12 per cent from last year and a 10-per-cent increase is expected this month. In Montreal, Eaton's said sales were soaring.

"We are hitting the jewelry more heavily than ever this year, with emphasis on diamond engagement rings," said a spokesman for Henry Birks and Sons Ltd., jewellers and silversmiths in Montreal. The company is budgeting for a 10-per-cent sales increase for the season.

Heavy Demand

Eaton's in Toronto, which began its Christmas season late in November with its traditional Santa Claus parade, has reported shortages in some merchandise because of heavy demand.

"There are shortages in our best sellers, such as women's apparel and sportswear, but we are recovering from this quite rapidly."

Over-all sales so far this season are up at least 10 per cent and Eaton's expect the increase to continue to the end of December.

Manitoba's cold weather hasn't kept shoppers at home. Eaton's in Winnipeg explained:

"For every person the cold keeps away it sends in one for long underwear or warm boots or something. There may have been a switch in sales, but we really haven't noticed."

Hudson's Bay Co. in Winnipeg said: "Commercialism is being played down a little more and in a few years you may see the decline of the push-push by stores," but the company added that sales are better than last year.

In Regina, a Simpson's spokesman said that if business continues the way it has been going, "it will be our biggest Christmas ever."

"The way people are coming in and spending money, I'm just delighted.

"There's generally a good feeling on the Prairies about the economic situation. People are spending more freely and we have lots of merchandise for them."

In Ottawa, Brian Ling, manager of St. Laurent shopping centre, the city's largest enclosed mall, said sales were up 12 per cent. He cited a number of factors.

"The opening market of men's clothing accounts for a lot of business. All of a sudden, men are proud peacocks ... whereas three or four years ago a new white shirt was all dad needed to get him through until next Christmas."

Mr. Ling added that toys and the emerging market for adult games are also ringing up sales.

In Hamilton, F. W. Daking, president of G. W. Robinson Ltd., said: "sales are very buoyant at this time." He predicted a record December for the company with sales increases of between 15 and 20 per cent over last year — "and last year was buoyant."

FIRST HAIRCUT for three-year-old Greg Shaw of Belleville, Ont., proved a rather noisy affair. Although Greg screamed disapprovingly as barber Gary Hill trimmed his tresses, he managed to survive his first adventure in the barber's chair and came out looking great.

Abortion Recommended If DES User Conceives

OTTAWA (CP(— Some Canadian university health centres are prescribing a "morning-after" birth-control pill that has been blasted in the United States as "cancer-causing."

A spokesman for the Carleton University health service said that diethylsitlboestrol (DES(has been given to some co-eds — "although not very many." The spokesman also said the drug is being used at universities in Toronto and Kingston, Ont.

A health research group under consumer critic Ralph Nader submitted a report to the United States Food and Drug Administration in Washington Monday charging that DES is "cancer-causing."

DES has not been approved for birth-control use in the United States, the group's report said.

The Carleton doctor said DES has been prescribed in daily doses for five days after mating. The concern had not been raised about suspected cancer at these dosage levels, she said.

"We have been concerned about possible effects of the drug on the fetuses," she said.

Authorities believe use of the hormone might lead to sexual abnormalities if the pregnancy was not aborted and some centres recommended that the woman should have an abortion if the "morning-after" treatment was not successful in halting the pregnancy.

DES has been banned in Canada as a growth stimulant in livestock, effective Jan 1, 1973.

The indefinite suspension of its use in animals was ordered about six weeks ago because "the safety of the drug, when used as a growth stimulant, has not been satisfactorily established," the health department said at that time.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister in charge of the health protection branch, said in an interview that the cancer-causing aspects seem, so far, to be related to cancer in the offspring — usually 15 to 20 years later.

"We are awaiting a report from a special advisory committee on oral contraceptives before we decide whether it should be contraindicated in birth control."

Dr. Morrison said that "so far as we are aware" no manufacturer is claiming the drug should be used in birth control.

"Physicians who use it for this purpose do so on their own responsibility."

DES was given to women during the 1940s and 1950s in small doses for long periods to help prevent miscarriages. Studies in the United States have shown that the daughters of these women are prone to cancer of the vagina at about age 15 to 20.

Health service officials at the Universjty of Toronto will continue dispensing the birth control pill, says the head of the health service.

Dr. George Wodehouse said the attack on the "morning after" pill is based on apparently good evidence, but their conclusions have no relationship to the university's program.

Fifteen students received the pill at the university last year he said, and none became pregnant.

Dr. Wodehouse said his department's program is different because the pill, administered within 48 hours of intercourse, is taken only for a five-day period.

He said the women should be told that if they do become pregnant after taking the drug, they should consider abortion because of the cancer threat to their babies.

Motivation Key

DEAR ABBY: I have always been a "night person." I seem to function much better during the night, and I sleep much better during the daylight hours.

If I get up before noon, I am completely exhausted all day. And if I try to go to sleep before 2 a.m., I toss and turn, and don't fall asleep until daybreak.

What gripes me is that nobody believes there are really "night people." My biggest problem is my husband. He just hates to have me sleep until noon and says it is just plain laziness. You can't imagine how much this has complicated my life, Abby.

Is there a way I can change myself into a day person? — Night Person

DEAR NIGHT: Yes. Drag yourself out of bed in the morning and pitch into those chores you formerly tackled after noon. I promise you that nobody will have to rock you to sleep at midnight. At first, you may encounter some difficulty in resetting your biological clock, but it can be done. The key word is "motivation."

DEAR ABBY: Regarding your advice to the divorcee who wants to meet the eligible attorney: your suggested "appointment at the office" approach would be successful only with an attorney of doubtful eligibility. Instead, why not use a mutual acquaintance?

Furthermore, she may have a difficult time finding a lawyer who meets her qualifications — one "who puts God first, family second, and his job last." Usually the order is reversed. — Non-Looking Lawyer

DEAR NON: A mutual acquaintance is not always easy to find.

It may be only a coincidence, but I know a beautiful, unhappily married woman who took her marital problems to an eligible attorney. He not only separated her from her husband — he separated her husband from his money. Then he married his client.

ROUGH TIME FOR SANTA

TORONTO (CP) — Deputy Santas are having a rough time with the Etobicoke kids.

"This is Santa calling from the North Pole," a seven-year-old was advised by one of a telephone brigade of Santas organized by the Metropolitan Toronto borough's schools to ask the youngsters if they've been good and what they'd like for Christmas.

Santa gulped and managed four.

A six-year-old girl didn't believe Santa had a Christmas tree at the North Pole. As she understood it — correctly — the tree line stopped well short of the top of the world.

A Grade 2 girl admonished: "What are you calling for? I already told you what I wanted at the shopping plaza."

"Going to leave a snack for Santa Christmas Eve?" a four-year-old was asked.

"Sure," he replied. "Have a beer."

Whose Little Boy Are You?

JELLY SIDE DOWN

nancy stahl

Everyone in our neighborhood is totally dedicated to the proposition that every child over 3 years of age should be obligated to play outside every day for at least 45 minutes. Unless he has a fever over 102 degrees or we are being pelted with hailstones the size of grapefruit.

At this time of year in our northern climate, you must dress a child in at least two of everything. Swathed as he is from toe to topknot with every hat, scarf, and mitten in the house, all traces of Daddy's nose and Grandma's chin are effectively camouflaged. He bears no resemblance to anybody or anything, except perhaps a walking Good Will depot. If he ever fell on his back, he would simply lie there like a beetle, helplessly flailing his arms and legs until someone took pity on him and turned him over.

Unless you have an excellent memory for old scarfs, it is entirely possible to bring him inside for lunch, spend the better part of an hour lousing up your manicure on assorted zippers and snaps, only to discover that you have just unwrapped a total stranger. "Whose little boy are you?" you ask despairingly.

"Mommy's," he answers, smiling engagingly. "And I'm berry hungry."

You are faced with an ethical dilemma. You could let him use the bathroom, spend another hour doing him up again, send him back outside, and try again.

On the other hand, you feel morally obligated to feed him. After all, you have this perfectly good chicken noodle soup sitting there, and even if he is a total stranger he undoubtedly belongs around here somewhere. In fact, the longer you look at him, the more he bears a strong resemblance to the cherubic entrepreneur who not only tore out your tulips last spring, but rang the doorbell and tried to sell them back to you.

Nevertheless, there are still 17 children out there, and the prospects of unwrapping the right one before the soup burns are extremely dim.

This has happened so often in our neighborhood that no mother even attempts to have her own child for lunch. We just bring in and feed the one or two who happen to be closest, vowing to sort them out properly in the spring.

TV HUMAN SEXUALITY MOST POPULAR CLASS

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A television class on human sexuality is proving the most popular course at Michigan State University.

Approximately 2,300 students signed up this fall for the class conducted by psychologist Andrew Barclay, who, like many of his students, usually sports work shirts and bell bottoms.

"To attract crowds like that, he must be doing something illegal," said one professor at MSU, where agriculture studies once were considered the prime academic pursuit.

"We're really not out to titillate anybody," said Barclay, 31. "We're not conducting an illustrated sex manual. We don't want to show them how to do it but to get them to better understand their feelings while they're doing it."

Barclay says his aim is to place sex in perspective and to help students adjust their sexual behavior so it fits naturally into their lives.

Included in the 140 topics during the 10-week course are masculine and feminine roles, homosexuality, self-awareness, and the social, psychological, racial and legal aspects of sex.

"While I stress that sex is good, healthy and perfectly normal, I also try to point out that you can engage in sex for the wrong reasons . . . for example, a male student who seeks sex only as an affirmation of his masculinity."

But since he feels that clinical discussions of sex can be boring, Barclay breaks his class into 10-minute blocks of information, getting the message across by using such multi-media effects as rock music, picture montages, bawdy songs and racy limericks.

Emotion Birth Control?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Researchers, studying chemicals in the brain that determine pregnancy, believe they are on the track of a new type of contraceptive for both women and men.

The researchers also believe that by controlling the chemicals they can make some sterile persons fertile.

The concept was explained this week by D. R. Abraham E. Rakoff, a Jefferson Medical College specialist in female endocrinology, who is studying a part of the brain called the hypothalamus.

Release Egg

Rakoff said the hypothalamus is like a computer that connects the rest of the brain with the body's hormone system and secrets chemicals which eventually are responsible for causing the ovaries to release eggs and the testes to make sperm.

He said emotion can influence the hypothalamus and is the largest single cause of an ovulation — failure to release an egg.

In such cases, he said, emotion turns off the hypothalamus so that it does not make the proper releasing factor to tell the pituitary or "master" gland to send an egg-releasing hormone messenger to the ovary.

Emotion can also have the opposite effect and turn on the hypothalamus, as in the case of false pregnancy, Rakoff said.

This occurs when a woman becomes convinced she is pregnant and her emotions, acting by way of the hypothalamus, makes her body respond by producing most of the usual signs of pregnancy.

Isolate Factor

Rakoff said scientists have been able to isolate and analyze the releasing factor involved in reproduction and have produced antagonists of the releasing factor.

He said the way is now open to use the releasing factor to produce pregnancy in women who are sterile because they lack the factor, or produce infertility by means of the antagonists.

He said the same option could be available to men because the releasing factor is involved in the triggering of the testes to make sperm.

Rakoff said the use of the antagonist is still in the experimental stage in use with animals. He made the remarks at a news conference called by the Family Planning Centre of Los Angeles.

Pregnancy Kits Recalled

OTTAWA (CP-AP) — Unreliable pregnancy test kits being recalled in the United States are not available in Canada, federal health department sources said Wednesday.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister in charge of the health protection branch, said "there's no indication that they are being sold in Canada."

"If they were," he said, "the department would take appropriate action to protect the public."

Health department officials are doing cross-country checks, he said.

Pregnancy test kits judged unreliable and gonorrhea test kits lacking proof of safety and effectiveness are being recalled throughout the United States, the Food and Drug Administration announced Tuesday.

The agency said any woman who has recently used an OVA II test kit should "see her physician immediately for accurate methods of detecting pregnancy."

The kits, sold without prescription and advertised in newspapers and women's magazines with the slogan, "When you want to be the first to know," are considered inaccurate, unreliable and prone to give false results, the FDA said.

La Mar Laboratories at Oceanside, N.Y., manufactures and distributes LPT Pregnancy test kits for professional use. The identical Ova II kits are manufactured by La Mar and distributed through drug stores by Faraday Laboratories of Hillside, N.J.

The FDA said that at its request, the U.S. attorney's office in New Jersey seized more than 8,000 Ova II kits last May. Faraday is contesting the seizure.

The other recall involves nearly 35,000 Gonodecten test kits for gonorrhea, manufactured by the Medical Products Division of U.S. Packaging Corp. at La Porte, Ind.

The FDA contends the nonprescription kits lack documented proof that they work.

Fred Monnon, president of U.S. Packaging Corp., said in La Porte that after the initial recall his firm would cooperate with the FDA to recertify the product.

A New Life For Trunk Murderer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The major worries facing Winnie Ruth Judd today are whether her lemon tree will survive the frost and her two dogs.

A year ago, Mrs. Judd was better known as Arizona's trunk murderer of the 1930s and her main concern was whether she was going to get out of the Arizona State Prison in time for the holidays. She was released on Dec. 22, 1971.

When she stepped from the prison in the middle of the night, Mrs. Judd ended 40 years spent behind bars, in a mental institution or as a fugitive.

Just in time for Christmas, she arrived at the Danville, Calif., home of Dr. and Mrs. John Blemer, for whom she had worked during part of a seven-year escape. The couple had promised her a job if the parole was granted.

Since then, Mrs. Judd has been living quietly in a cottage near the Blemer's larger home. She is known as Marian Lane, the name she used the first time she lived with the California couple.

"She is going out with friends Christmas day," Mrs. Blemer told the Phoenix Gazette in a telephone interview. She said Mrs. Judd has health problems "off and on," but generally is doing well.

Now 68, Mrs. Judd has "a dear little garden and an assortment of animals that includes a tomcat and a little black cat," Mrs. Blemer said.

Mrs. Judd's two dogs are kept by relatives of the Blemers and brought occasionally for visits since "our big dog eats them up," Mrs. Blemer said.

The saga of Winnie Ruth Judd began Oct. 17, 1931 in a duplex apartment in Phoenix.

Mrs. Judd has contended steadfastly over the years that the shooting deaths of her friends, Agnes Anne Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson, were accidental.

The bodies of the two victims, however, were found when a railroad agent opened two trunks at a Los Angeles station. The bodies had been dismembered.

Over-40's Ignored

LONDON (AP) — Secretaries over 40 often are dedicated, highly skilled and willing to work long hours without carping about money, yet "bosses in the majority of offices just don't want to know the over-40s," a private employment agency said.

'Minority Rules' in Mill Bay Zoning Bylaw Dispute

DUNCAN — Mill Bay residents discovered that a minority can rule when directors of the Cowichan Valley Regional Board defeated, by a close margin, a subdivision bylaw for the area Wednesday evening.

Although two-thirds of the residents have said they are in favor of the bylaw, a majority of the directors feel that people who have made provisions to develop land in the area will be hurt.

The bylaw would have placed a temporary freeze on subdivisions in the area until zoning could be instituted. The bylaw was not to be made retroactive.

Since the bylaw was given the first three readings in October the department of highways has frozen all subdivisions, the board was advised.

Gerald Patterson, chairman of the Mill Bay-Malahat Advisory Planning Commission, urged directors to give final approval to the bylaw Wednesday.

He said his commission has been working since June on setting up regulations in the area.

In August, when a well-advertised public meeting was held, Patterson said 90 per cent of the more than 90 people in attendance voted in favor of a subdivision bylaw to later be followed by zoning regulations.

Following the meeting, Patterson said 681 information letters went out to property owners as well as absentee landowners.

Patterson said a house-to-house canvass of the area was just completed Tuesday.

"The result is that two-thirds of the residents are in favor," he said.

Patterson said that his committee got replies from 503 of the 700 owner electors in the area.

He said 335 residents are in favor of the bylaw while 168 are against.

Director Ralph Kier, who represents the Mill Bay area, reminded directors that the planning commission made sure that an appeal exists in the bylaw. "It was put in so that no one could be badly hurt. Anyone has the right to appeal."

Kier warned that currently there is no protection against unsuitable or undesirable commercial or industrial development.

W. A. Warner, spokesman for the group opposing the bylaw and a director of Mill Bay Estates which is currently developing land in the area, urged directors not to make any decisions until they could hold a public meeting.

After the defeat of the bylaw, director Margaret Robertson warned that "there will now be development that the area doesn't want."

Director Don Morton felt that it was a good bylaw but spoke against passing it. "Although two-thirds of the residents are in favor, haven't we got a responsibility to the one-third who will be hurt?' he asked.

Director Pat O'Brien said he felt the board should have gone with the majority of the residents. "The board decided to defeat a bylaw in spite of the majority. The minority rules."

Members of the advisory planning commission said they are now back in "square one" and will have to start all over again if they want regulations.

INDUSTRY IN DANGER

The Orient has discovered that British Columbians are the world's biggest mushroom eaters and now threaten to wipe out one of the provinces most flourishing industries with their products, according to growers.

A. D. (Paddy) Pigott, manager of the Fraser Valley Mushroom Co-operative, said Taiwan, Korea and China are exporting thousands of pounds of mushrooms to B.C. and other provinces.

The imports sell between one and two dollars a case cheaper than the local product and threaten the livelihood of 70 growers in the Fraser Valley and one on Vancouver Island, he said.

"The Co-op has requested the federal government set a quota on imported mushrooms," he said. "The United States and West Germany have quotas on imports. They were obliged to do so to protect their own interests," Pigott said it is impossible for the B.C. industry to compete with mushroom growers from the Orient.

"They can hire a worker for a whole week for less than what we pay a man to work an hour, he stated. "Mushroom workers in Taiwan and Korea are between the ages of 12 and 13."

He noted that B.C. grows about five million pounds of mushrooms a year and ships them by air to all major centres in western Canada.

"Comsumption of mushrooms in B.C. is also the highest in the world," he added. Consumption on a per capita basis is about four pounds a year.

Mushroom in dollar value is the second largest vegetable crop in B.C. next to potatoes," he said. "In three or four years it will be the largest crop if we are not knocked out by imports."

Pigott pointed out that sales in B.C. this year went up 25 per cent.

"Sales will continue to go up, if Ottawa acts," he said. "If nothing is done we will lose an industry."

Airport Application Withdrawn

DUNCAN — The Regional Board will withdraw its 1969 application for a grant from the Department of Transport to complete the Glenora Airport, directors agreed Wednesday evening.

The decision was made after recent pressure from Glenora residents who are opposing the project in their area southwest of Duncan.

Since mothers and children from the area picketed the site no further work has been carried out.

Although directors were to vote on a second resolution, not to renew the five-year lease with the Cowichan Airport Society when it comes up in 1976, it was withdrawn.

Director Ken Irving, who introduced the resolution, explained that the board's solicitor said the board could not legally tie a future board to the resolution. He pointed out that it is up to residents to let the board at that time know there position.

The regional board can do nothing to stop the project because of the lease.

Water Experts Disagree On 'Drought' Indicators

A suggestion that the water table of lower Vancouver Island is disturbingly low appears to be based only on surface indicators, says spokesman for the provincial water rights branch.

Surface water is down, said Geoffrey Simmons, assistant deputy minister of water resources, agreeing with observations of naturalist Freeman King who is a park assistant for the department of recreation and conservation.

King suggested that because of a lack of water in streams, low lands and wells on Saanich Peninsula and in the upland parts of southern Vancouver Island, the "normal water table is down — way, way down."

Observation wells of the water resources department's water investigation branch only partly support this theory and two of the three on Saanich Peninsula may be low for other reasons, a spokesman said.

In any case it is too early to judge the water table properly, he added, because the lowest point of post-autumn dry spell comes about the end of January when the table normally starts to rise. Subsurface water usually rises until about mid-May.

"There is some indication that this year's water table may not be as low as last year's or previous years," the spokesman said. Records go back only six years and the branch is still in the process of developing new observation wells on Vancouver Island.

One of the established wells, located north of Patricia Bay airport, is unaffected by the scarcity of surface water. Two others situated further south are near municipal water supply wells which can affect the level in the observation wells, the spokesman said.

The branch considers dry conditions to be normal for this time of the year. But Kind said he had never seen water so low in his 48 years as a Victoria resident.

The ground is not holding the water it should be for some wildlife next year.

When streams dry up entirely, fish eggs do not survive; frogs, crayfish, beneficial insects in their marine stage also die or fail to hatch; when ponds dry up shore birds and migratory birds have no inland rest and feeding places.

King said children should have been skating the past week at Panama Flats off Carey Road, but the usual flooding of farmland is absent this winter. Raper's Pond, on West Burnside Road, is dry, Colquitz River is nearly dry, most Highland wells are low, all creeks heading up-Island are down and the spring-fed water supply at Francis Park is dry. Niagara Creek, one of the larger watercourses on the Malahat, has no water.

"We are up against a cycle and no man can help it," he said.

The naturalist said the cause may partly be the result of logging upland areas, leaving nothing to hold water in the higher altitudes and allowing it to run off quickly to sea.

"This is the second driest year on record," Upward said.

Since records have been kept by the district, commencing in 1915, only 1952 was drier, he said.

But so far the level of reservoirs and lakes in the watershed is acceptable. There are about eight billion gallons in reserve, which Upward said is sufficient for eight or nine months normal consumption.

He hopes for more rain to build up the system for next summer.

EX-EMPLOYEE CRACKS AT HENDERSON

OTTAWA (CP) — A former employee of the auditor-general's department says he thinks Maxwell Henderson is playing a "political game" when he complains about his treatment at the hands of the Trudeau government.

G. K. Shaw, who worked in the department for eight months this year, said this in letters to the editors of Montreal Gazette and Ottawa Citizen and in a telephone interview Wednesday.

His letter said: "I am disappointed to see (Auditor-General) Henderson playing a political game as I believe his office should operate beyond the gamesmanship of party politics."

In the interview, Shaw said he believes Henderson is trying to bring about the downfall of the government.

Henderson declined to comment on his letter from Shaw, an Anglican minister who left the church for a time to work in a secular job.

Shaw, now a minister in Ottawa, is former secretary-treasurer of the Anglican diocese of Calgary. He is also a chartered accountant and said he worked from February to October in various auditor-general departments and for a time on a computer auditing group.

Henderson recently charged that the government is continuing to hamper his function as public watchdog over federal spending. He said the government downgraded senior positions in his department and had refused to rectify the situation. He said his annual reports are late because of the lack of staff.

Prime Minister Trudeau stated recently that the government has always offered Henderson the personnel he requested at the salaries he wanted to carry out his duties.

Shaw, who emphasized in the interview that he was speaking as a citizen and not on behalf of his church, said in his letter he finds it difficult to place great credence in Henderson's claims.

"My observations over an eight-month period indicated very few employees who might be said to be working to capacity (self included) and made me aware the lateness of the annual report might well be the result of over-cautious scrutiny of wording and punctuation.

"Granted, the auditor-general must deal with facts and be certain of their validity. But need almost half a year be spent by senior personnel carrying out an exercise in grammatical fastidiousness?

U.S. Victory at UN

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — The Soviet Union was smarting today from a serious political defeat which saw the United States win a bid to have its contribution to costs of running the United Nations cut sharply.

The General Assembly voted by an overwhelming 81 to 27 Wednesday night to trim the U.S. contribution to 25 from 31.52 per cent, still the highest of any member state. The 27 who voted against included the Soviet Union and Cuba. Twenty-two members abstained.

The Soviet assessment of UN costs is 14 per cent, but Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik warned that Moscow would reserve its right to cut its contribution also. He said the principle of setting assessments according to the relative ability of states to pay had been violated.

According to that principle, he said, the U.S. as the richest country in the world, should pay 38 per cent.

In some of the angriest language he has used at this session, Malik accused the U.S. of resorting to blackmail in an "unprecedented arm-twisting" campaign. The reduction was unjustifiable, unjust and unacceptable, he said.

The U.S. argument—that a more important principle was that no member should bear such a disproportionate share of the budget as the U.S. had done for many years—was labelled "mendacious" and "fallacious" by Malik.

Maritimes Look Again At Gift Tax Laws

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Prince Edward Island's plan to rescind estate and gift tax legislation has prompted the other two Maritime governments to review their involvement in that field of taxation.

Plans for the review were announced by premiers Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia and Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick Wednesday at a news conference at the end of the eighth meeting of the council of Maritime premiers.

The two premiers said they discussed the question of succession duties legislation with Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island during the two-day meeting.

Mr. Campbell announced several weeks ago his government would introduce legislation during the next sitting of his legislature to abolish existing estate and gift tax acts.

He said his provincial treasury stood to collect only $240,000 from such acts during the next three years, the cut-off date of the legislation.

"It's not worthwhile," he said.

Both premiers Hatfield and Regan said they now had a "better understanding" of why Mr. Campbell's Liberal government wanted to opt out of succession duties legislation.

Premier Hatfield told reporters he would return to New Brunswick and discuss the P.E.I. move with his minister of finance and cabinet colleagues.

Mr. Regan said: "I will report back to my cabinet to consider the question. We have consistently said if Ontario and Quebec rescind their acts we would look closely at ours also."

It was earlier estimated Nova Scotia would collect about $3 million annually from the tax while New Brunswick would gain about $2 million. Mr. Regan said it now looks as though his government will get more than $3 million this year, but he could not put a figure on it.

The four Atlantic provinces, Manitoba and Saskatchewan entered succession duty field early this year after the federal government abandoned it in favor of a capital-gains levy.

After much debate in their respective legislatures, premiers Regan and Hatfield also set a cut-off date of three years for the tax. However, there have been fears in some opposition circles that P.E.I.'s move would create a tax haven there.

During the news conference, the premiers also unveiled a plan for the creation of a tri-province commission to deal with higher education in the region. Premier Hatfield said the plan, which he termed a white paper, would be the basis for draft bills to be introduced to their respective legislatures during their next sittings.

The commission would be called the Maritime provinces higher education commission.

CANADIAN CHARGED WITH BOMB HOAX

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A young Canadian was arrested in the lobby of the Fontainebleau Hotel Monday and charged with attempting to extort $100,000 from the hotel with a bomb hoax.

Alton Cyril McCorquodale, 21, of Windsor, Ont., was charged with violation of the Hobbs Act, which covers extortions against businesses operating in interstate commerce.

A man claimed to have planted several bombs in the giant hotel, an FBI spokesman said, but a search determined that there were no bombs in the Fontainebleau.

An FBI spokesman said the man made the extortion demand in person after walking into the hotel manager's office. An employee in the office called police and he was arrested minutes later without offering resistance.

Hit-Run Driver Injures Barnard

CAPE TOWN (Reuter) — An African native has been arrested in an accident in which heart transplant pioneer Dr. Christiaan Barnard and his wife were knocked down and injured by a hit-and-run driver here Wednesday night, police said.

A spokesman said police were also holding a truck with licence plates from Beaufort West, where Dr. Barnard grew up.

Dr. Barnard, 49, and his 22-year-old wife, Barbara, who is pregnant, were taken to Groote Schuur Hospital, scene of the heart transplant operations, where their condition was described as "satisfactory."

A hospital spokesman said they were unlikely to be discharged for a few days.

Dr. Barnard has suspected rib fractures, internal injuries and abrasions, while his wife was being treated for light chest injuries and severe abrasions.

A senior police officer earlier noted that it was a strange coincidence that the hit-and-run vehicle had licence plates from Dr. Barnard's hometown, about 400 miles northeast of Cape Town.

Dr. Barnard recently vowed never to return to the town after local people denounced his decision to join the opposition United party. They dared him to return and run for parliament in his birthplace.

The senior police officer told reporters: "It is much too early to do any guessing. We have no idea if there was more to the hit-and-run or if it was in fact an accident. Plenty of people have telephoned to suggest this as a possibility—but what can I say at this stage?"

Eyewitnesses said there were two teen-agers in the truck which ran into the couple, tossed them into the air and flung them into the side of a passing car. Dr. Barnard was knocked unconscious and his weeping wife lay a short distance away covered in blood.

A motorist chased the truck but lost it in the heavy traffic. However, he was able to give police its licence number.

29 Persons Rescued

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fireman and police rescued 29 persons from a blazing skid-road rooming house Wednesday.

No serious injuries were reported but several men were taken to hospital for observation.

Before the flames were brought under control occupants of the rooming house, across the street from police headquarters, were forced outside onto fire escape platforms by the smoke.

"Thank God they didn't jump," said a policeman at the scene. "They might have been killed."

Band Elections

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Incumbent Gus Gottfriedson, Norman Larue and Joe Leonard have been nominated to contest the chief's seat in Kamloops Indian band elections Dec. 21. Gottfriedson is seeking his second term as chief.

Insurance Talks

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — Ian Carne, administrator of the B.C. Crop Insurance program, was to meet here today with an advisory board of Peace River farmers to discuss revisions in the program. He said he will be studying ways to make the plan more flexible and thus increase participation. At present, only about 12 per cent of Peace Area farmers belong to the plan.

Special Meeting

VANCOUVER (CP) — A special meeting of the University of B.C. arts faculty voted Wednesday to appoint a committee to look into increased student representation at meetings of the faculty and of its committees concerned with academic policy.

Recount Ordered

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Raymond Rodgers, an aldermanic candidate in White Rock, was granted an official recount of ballots in last Saturday's city election. Rodgers, who was 33 votes behind the last of the three successful candidates in the election-night count, argued that the returning officer tallied results from five polls without himself counting the individual ballots.

Runway Expension

VANCOUVER (CP) — Construction is scheduled to begin next year on a new 11,000-foot-long runway at Vancouver International airport.

Phil Bowes, regional airport manager for the ministry of transport, said the new landing surface would be part of the federal government's plan to pump about $150 million into expansion of the airport during the next 10 years.

Canadian Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — A motion to require all University of B.C. students to take courses in Canadian history and politics was rejected Wednesday by the UBC senate. Student senator Al Robbins, in proposing the motion, said the university already sets universal pre-requisites for degrees in several subjects.

Exemption Asked

PORT EDWARD (CP) — The Port Edward village council will ask the provincial municipal affairs department for a special exemption to allow a referendum on the purchase of a fire truck to again be presented to the voters. The referendum, involving expenditure of $34,000, was defeated in last Saturday's village election. The vote was 59 per cent in favor, one percentage point short of the required 60 per cent.

SURREY Mayor Bill Vander Zalm has again demanded an investigation into land dealings in his municipality. An earlier request has not been acted upon by the department of municipal affairs and Vander Zalm Wednesday said his council wants a formal investigation "as well as the one by the RCMP."

THREE SHOTS FIRED: POLICEMAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police Constable E. J. Kajander testified Wednesday that he heard three shots on the evening of Nov. 28 as police tried to apprehend four youths fleeing from a car that had been reported stolen.

He was testifying before a preliminary hearing into a charge of criminal negligence against Constable Brian Thomas Honeybourn in the fatal shooting of Danny Teece, 17, of Vancouver.

Kajander said he was sure the first shot was from a .38 calibre revolver, the same type police carry. He said he heard a second shot about 10 seconds later which he was sure was from a small calibre gun and not a police weapon. Then, the constable said, he heard a third shot which was muffled and he could not determine the calibre.

Court was told the shooting came after four plainclothes police officers had staked out a suspected stolen car believed to contain stolen goods. Constables I. G. Battcock and Kajander were in one car and Constables Bruce Campbell and Honeybourn were in another vehicle.

When four youths attempted to drive the suspected car away, it was blocked by the police cars, forcing the occupants to flee on foot.

Kajander said after he heard the first shot he gave chase to a man who had jumped and cleared a fence.

Battcock testified that as he drove up behind the allegedly stolen car his partner, Kajander, was already alighting from the police vehicle.

Opium Producer Admits Problem

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — "This addiction differs from the addiction of the civilized countries," the doctor said. "In Badakshan, the people have nothing to do for six to seven months of the year when the snow cuts off the territory. They eat and sleep. They take opium."

The isolated northeastern province of Badakshan is famous for its rare sheep, horses, semi-precious stones and poppy fields, which Western investigators believe produce some of the 100 or more tons of opium smuggled from Afghanistan each year.

About 350,000 people are scattered across Badakshan's 17,500 square miles and for the first time the government is admitting officially it has a problem with the opium addicts there and plans to do something for them.

The admission is tucked in a relief plan for the province, where the government is rushing wheat before the snow falls in an effort to head off famine over the winter.

The plan document says, "Opium addiction, a major health problem in the distressed area, requires immediate attention." Western diplomats in the Afghan capital said until recently the government was reluctant to admit there was a problem whenever the subject arose in connection with talks on smuggling and the growing of opium-yielding poppies.

Authoritative surveys indicate in some parts of Badakshan 90 per cent of the population is addicted to opium, and whole villages are populated by addicts, many of whom must sell their land or their entire food crop for the year to get opium.

Dr. M. A. Wahavzada, the public health ministry's chief of preventive medicine, said in some locations the Turkomen women who work from dawn to late at night weaving carpets dose their children with opium to keep them quiet during the long hours of toil, creating addicts virtually from birth.

He said addiction had become acute during the last two years of drought. Afghan government bans against the sale and production of opium have boosted prices, making life more miserable for addicts. Government sources say an addict may consume up to eight ounces of opium daily, paying for it with between 75 and 90 pounds of wheat—enough grain to last an adult three months.

Kidney Donation Speeded

LONDON (Reuter)—A little red card will soon be made available to millions of Britons, enabling them to donate their kidneys for transplantation after sudden death.

The idea, just endorsed by the government, is designed to promote the highly successful transplant operations now being performed at a rate approaching 500 a year in Britain alone.

Parliament has been told that donor identification cards will be displayed in doctors' offices and hospital waiting rooms.

Anyone willing to so donate his kidneys will be able to pick-up a card, fill in his name and acknowledge that he has discussed the matter with his next-of-kin. Names, addresses and telephone numbers of next-of-kin will also be listed. The potential donor will be asked to keep the card with him at all times.

It still is not clear, however, whether the card alone will be regarded as sufficient permission for removal of the kidneys of a highway accident victim, for example, or whether a further check will have to be made with the next-of-kin.

Here, the time factor is all-important. To be of use, kidneys must be removed from donors within an hour after their deaths. Left in the body longer, the kidney is damaged irreparably.

If no official ruling is made by the government or by responsible medical authorities, a number of surgeons could be expected to go ahead and remove kidneys on the strength of the card alone, or perhaps after having tried but failed to contact relatives.

Aid for Vietnam

OSLO, (Reuter) — Norway's parliament approved Tuesday a grant of $162,500 in humanitarian aid to civilians in Vietnam. One-third will be granted to South Vietnam, one-third to North Vietnam and one third to the National Liberation Front.

Vitamin Ceilings Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposed regulations on maximum levels of vitamins in the United States will bring the Americans in line with similar regulations in force "for 25 years" in Canada, health department spokesmen said Wednesday.

U.S. Food and Drug officials proposed regulations to limit the strength of vitamin A and D products.

"It was our concern about overdoses years ago that led to the Canadian regulations," Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister, health protections branch, said in an interview.

Canadian regulations appear more stringent than those proposed in Washington. They indicate both minimum and maximum limits.

In Canada, maximum daily dose of vitamin A is limited to 10,000 international units (I.U.) unless prescribed by a doctor, Dr. Morrison said. The maximum limit, unless under doctor's prescription, for vitamin D is 1,000 I.U.

Canadian regulations limit claims that can be made by manufacturers for vitamin preparations and limit the amounts of vitamins that can be added to foods, Dr. Morrison said. If they are added and the information is so advertised, then there are minimum levels of the amounts.

ADDITIONS LIMITED

As well, there are limits on the amounts of vitamin D that can be added to any advertised preparations. This limit is 400 I.U.

Preparations that contain between 400 I.U. and 1,000 I.U. of vitamin D cannot be advertised and they must carry the statement that the preparation is "for therapeutic use only."

Under the American regulations, the proposed daily limits are 10,000 I.U. for vitamin A and 400 for vitamin D.

Vitamin A, which is essential for health, including good eyesight, is found in liver, butter, margarine and the yellow and orange vegetables.

Vitamin D, also essential for health, especially strong bones and teeth, is "the sunshine vitamin" and is supplied in adequate doses in fortified milk.

In the United States, vitamins A and D recently have been promoted in treatment of acne, night blindness and arthritis. Health officials in Washington said "neither is proven effective for these conditions in well-nourished people."

CHARGEX

Chalidze Forced Into U.S. Exile

NEW YORK — The Soviet Union stripped Valery Chalidze of his citizenship Wednesday and told him he can't go home again.

Chalidze, a persistent critic of Soviet violations of human rights, came here from Moscow last month with official permission to lecture at several U.S. universities.

Many observers assumed he would not be allowed to return to the Soviet Union, but Chalidze kept saying that he would be.

On Wednesday he said in a press conference: "I hoped this would not happen."

The Soviet move against Chalidze appeared to observers here and in Moscow to be part of a drive to repress dissent in the Soviet Union which has put many dissidents in jail or mental homes and forced others into exile.

PARIS, Ont. — Walter Rowe isn't going to get far on the cost-of-living increase he received on this month's Canada pension cheque.

Rowe laughed when he read a report of a retired Toronto carpenter whose monthly increase was three cents. "I can top that," said the retired maintenance worker. "I got a whole penny."

Unlike the Toronto man who was quite upset over the three cents, Rowe found the whole thing amusing.

SAN FRANCISCO — Cancer victim Mrs. Laverne Simmons has died three days after winning $500,000 in a malpractice suit.

She had sued Dr. Gilbert Cochrane for failing to diagnose a lump on her breast as cancer.

RIO DE JANEIRO — Brazil's supreme military court has overturned a lower military tribunal decision and found Tanya Charters Chao of Vancouver not guilty of subversion against the Brazilian government.

Mrs. Chao, 27, was sentenced in May to one year in prison for collaborating with an underground Communist guerrilla organization that wanted to overthrow Brazil's military regime. She proclaimed her innocence throughout the case.

WASHINGTON — Cathy Douglas, the 29-year-old wife of Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, has passed her bar examination.

"Cathy expected the worst," said Douglas. "She remembered all the mistakes she made."

NOW MARTHA FACES NEW CHARGE

MONTREAL — Martha Adams, currently on trial on a charge of living off the avails of prostitution, was arrested at her home Wednesday night and charged with operating a bawdy house.

Police said Miss Adams would be arraigned on the new charge before appearing in sessions court for the third day of her trial on the previous charge.

Five "call-girls" testified Wednesday that they handed over part of their earnings to Miss Adams, after she arranged to have clients meet them.

Judge Roger Savard has banned publication of witnesses' names.

Car Dealer Must Pay For Promises

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A judge ruled Wednesday that, like purchasers of less expensive items, a Potomac, Md., couple is entitled to a refund of the money they paid for an automobile sold to them two years ago "under false representations."

Judge Joyce Hens Green ruled that a salesman for Wilson-McIntosh Buick of Washington made "misrepresentations ... of fact ..." when he told Dale and Norma Morton that they could have air-conditioning installed in their new 1971 Opel station wagon.

The dealer must return $2,472.89 to the Mortons. They must return the car.

Maurice Murphy, an official of the Automotive Trade Association, said he had never heard of such a case "in my 20 years in the business. I don't know what impact it will have on the (automobile) trade, because I haven't seen the decision."

Norma Morton called Wednesday's decision "really fantastic."

The decision was only a partial victory for the Mortons, who had originally sued General Motors and Wilson McIntosh for breach of warranty.

The Mortons' trouble began two years ago when their eight-year-old Puegeot began to fail.

"When we went to pick up the car, it wasn't the color we ordered (orange)," Mrs. Morton told a reporter. "I didn't care about that because we were buying it as a family car, but the next day we discovered the car didn't have fully-reclining seats (another feature the couple had been promised) and we wanted them because we camp."

The salesman, whom the Mortons said they had known for several months, told them "we could get the air-conditioning installed at Sears and save $100," Mrs. Morton said.

There was testimony during the trial that the Opel does not come with factory-installed air-conditioning that the Mortons said they were promised.

The Sears-installed air-conditioning not only didn't work, it ruined the car's electrical system, the court was told.

In the meantime, the Mortons had other problems with the car, includiing a leaky gas tank, a trouble-plagued electrical system, non-functioning emergency brake warning light, noisy transmission, trouble with the gears, an inoperative parking light, a loose front seat and other complaints.

They finally gave up attempting to have the car repaired and filed suit last December.

BEAUTY QUEEN ABDICATES . . .

MONCTON, N.B. — Beauty pageants are "a great big political gag," says Paulette Leger who abdicated as Miss New Brunswick 1972 after four months as a beauty queen.

A girl as an individual is taken advantage of ... She becomes something to be set up and sold," Paulette said, after submitting her resignation to organizers of the pageant.

Her letter, released by the organizers, read in part: "Due to personal feeling with respect to beauty pageants, I feel I can no longer hold the title of Miss New Brunswick."

It was the second title Miss Leger has surrendered in a year. In September she resigned as Miss Moncton.

2-Pronged Bid To Industry

Region Spur to Hospital Growth

Victoria Times
THURSDAY, DEC. 14, 1972 41
FOURTH SECTION

The Capital Regional District board took action on two fronts Wednesday to try to boost the sagging fortunes of local industry.

Prodded by a request from the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce and two board directors, it was agreed that:

The planning department regard "as a matter of top priority" the planning and allocation of land for industrial park purposes, warehousing and distribution;

The regional planning committee discuss the chamber's support for declaring Greater Victoria a designated area to qualify for federal business incentives, obtain "all information pertaining to the subject" and invited a representative of the federal department of regional economic expansion to speak.

At first, the board was simply going to refer the chamber's letter of support for the federal incentives for initial establishment of businesses (but not continuing subsidies) to the committee.

But Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen and Outer Gulf Islands director Jim Campbell said such a motion would defer any possible action for a month. They wanted the board to find out what incentive programs are available.

Pollen said the "biggest frustration and biggest failure of the board" this year is its lack of action on an industrial park.

He wanted federal officials to "tell us what they do once an area is designated." He said electronic industry and fish boat construction, "industries like this," could be developed locally.

"The situation is critical. We can't continue to hide our heads in the sand," he said.

Victoria Ald. Clyde Savage said the region has been criticized for inaction on an industrial park.

"The fact is we don't have an area to set up secondary industrial places," he said, other than a few small areas.

Referring to Bapco Paint's decision Tuesday to move its 155-employee plant to the Mainland, Pollen said it is "very poor" to hear criticism that Bapco wasn't given encouragement by local government to remain here.

He said it was a decision by Canadian Industries Limited, a major national company, to "rationalize their production to be near 90 per cent of their market."

A senior administrator will be hired to get the sluggish program for regional hospital development in the Capital district on the move.

Directors of the regional hospital board debated the proposal for about half an hour at their meeting Wednesday before approving it by about a two-thirds majority.

Executive director Dennis Young said in a report containing the recommendation that the board will likely have to pay $22,000 to $23,000 to get a person with the necessary qualifications.

His job will be to pull the board's hospital work together, initiate and guide planning and be the connecting link between the board, its advisory committee, doctors, hospitals and the provincial government.

In the debate, Clyde Savage, one of Victoria's directors, said concerning regional hospital development: "I don't know of anything that's been a bigger mess, a bigger failure."

People are fed up with the lack of progress, he said, speaking in favor of the move which had earlier been recommended by the board's executive committee.

One of the points chairman Art Young made in favor of hiring a director for the hospital program was an intimation that under the new provincial government, the regional hospital board will eventually be getting more responsibility.

Jim Campbell, director for the Outer Gulf Islands, said: "I don't think there's any alternative to putting someone in where there's obviously been such a vacuum."

Leading the opposition was Tom Christie, another city director, who suggested the addition would be "empire building," wondered allowed why the executive director couldn't handle some of the proposed duties and Andrew Pitkethley, the board's consultant, others of them. Christie also argued the salary range under discussion was too high.

Directors Earl Pallister and Les Passmore both said they thought the move premature. Joining them in voting no were directors William Noel and R. M. Emery.

Two other recommendations from Dennis Young were approved unanimously. They will see the board's advisory committee expanded from six to seven and appointments made directly the regional hospital board to try and get a broader community representation.

In other business, the board approved an executive committee recommendation that a $40,000 argon laser photocoagulator for Victoria General Hospital be approved, "conditional upon the clear understanding by the board of Victoria General Hospital that all ophthalmologists possessing the necessary training and experience in the use of this equipment be permitted to use it."

The board also passed a resolution requesting cabinet approval to borrow an additional $215,000 without ratepayer approval, to cover cost of opening an open heart surgery unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital, expanding the intensive care unit at Victoria General and the kitchen and physiotherapy facilities at Lady Minto Hospital at Ganges.

Lawyers Arrested

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistani authorities arrested about 150 lawyers who demonstrated Tuesday in Lahore against police treatment of students. Reports reaching Karachi said the lawyers were protesting what they called police brutalities against Punjab University students involved in an anti-government demonstration Monday. Two students were reported killed.

Pair Escape Fire

NANAIMO (CP) — Two adults escaped a blazing two-storey wood frame house at the Shell Beach Indian Reserve near here. Sixteen persons in three families occupied the house, but 14 of them were away visiting when the fire, of undetermined origin, destroyed the home.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge William Ostler, in provincial court Wednesday, told a 19-year-old Detroit man he is the kind of immigrant Canada does not need.

Jay Sheldon Eder was sentenced to six months in prison for theft under $200, 14 days for possession of cannabis resin, and 14 days for possession of marijuana. All sentences are to be served concurrently.

John Macintyre, Crown counsel for the theft charge, said Eder was stopped by Victoria police while driving near Wharf and Johnson streets Nov. 22. He was in possession of three pairs of pliers, valued at $30, and a screwdriver worth $5. When questioned he admitted to stealing the items Nov. 20 from a car parked at the C and E Motel, 474 Gorge.

Michael Hutchison, prosecuting on the controlled drug charges, said a hashpipe containing cannabis resin and a small bag of marijuana were found on his person when the accused was checked the same day.

Eder pleaded guilty Nov. 23 and was remanded to Wednesday to have a pre sentence report prepared.

Macintyre said the report was not favorable and "I think if he's going to be sent to prison he should be given a reasonably long term."

"In my opinion it's quite an astonishing report," said Ostler.

"You have lived a hedonistic life simply for your own gratification. You have been manipulated. You have already been deported from this country once, yet you come back, presumably simply to amuse yourself, to be absorbed in the resident drug culture at Rochdale College in Toronto, for example," said Ostler.

"You seem to feel that you can come and go as you please in this country. That may be your impression but it is not a fact. There are rules with respect to people living in and entering this country and we would be obliged if people like you would respect them," he continued.

"People are not free to wander in and out of Canada and conduct themselves as they please when they're there, as you apparently think.

"If I may say so, with respect, you're the type of immigrant that we do not need. We have enough troubles here as it is," said Ostler.

A 72-year-old man was sentenced to a total of one month in jail for two counts of wilful damage.

Amos Clarkin, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty to throwing two bricks through a plate glass window at the Eastern Hotel, 550 Johnson, and breaking a pool cue at the Century Inn, 603 Pandora, Dec. 12.

Macintyre said Victoria police attended at the Century Inn at 9:20 p.m. on Dec. 12 and asked Clarkin to go outside for questioning with regard to the broken window.

According to Macintyre, Clarkin said to police, "If I'm going to get nailed for breaking a window at the Eastern, I might as well get nailed for this too." He then picked up a pool cue and smashed it on a table.

A 17-year-old Ladysmith man was given a suspended sentence and a six-month probationary term for possession of marijuana.

Hutchison said Timothy Dowler was checked by Ladysmith RCMP while hitch-hiking on the Island Highway Nov. 18 and a bag of the drug was found on his person.

In traffic court, Donald Frederick Stuef, 22, of 3208 Frechette, and Norbert Ashmore, 38, of 1461 Pembroke, were each fined $350 by Judge Harold Alder for impaired driving. Stuef was also prohibited from driving in Canada for one year.

Jet Misses Airport, No Injuries

BOMBAY (UPI) — An East German jet with 28 persons aboard landed at the wrong airport Wednesday and narrowly missed hitting the hulk of another airliner which made the same error and crashed three months ago.

The East German jet, a Russian-made Ilyushin 18, was scheduled to land at Bombay's Santa Cruz International Airport. Instead, it headed for Juhu, a flying club airfield six miles away.

Control tower officials at both Santa Cruz and Juhu sent frantic signals and fired rockets to warn the pilot he was flying into the wrong airfield which had a shorter runaway unable to accommodate international airliners.

By the time the pilot realized his mistake he had come down too low to go back up and landed at Juhu. As he raced along the runaway he saw the hulk of a Japan Air Lines (JAL) plane just in front of him.

The pilot swerved the plane left and brought it to a halt at the dead end of the runaway.

Police Constable Saka Ram, who was guarding the damaged JAL plane lying at the far end of the runaway, said "it was incredible" that the Ilyushin did no hit the JAL plane.

Ram said, "I saw the German plane racing down and coming close to the JAL plane. The pilot must have suddeny realized what was ahead of him. He swerved to the left and brought the plane to a halt at the deadend of the runaway. It dived into a ditch and its nose was slightly damaged."

The pilot of a JAL DC-8 made a similar mistake and landed at Juhu instead of at Santa Cruz on Sept. 24. The JAL plane was badly damaged and 22 persons on board were injured. The JAL plane is awaiting auction.

The East German plane was bound for Dacca from East Berlin and was carrying 12 Bangladesh nationals, eight East Germans and a crew of eight including two air hostesses.

Kidnappers Demand $1M Ransom

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Efforts are under way to collect a $1 million ransom for the release of British businessman Ronald Grove by his kidnappers, believed to be members of the Marxist People's Revolutionary Army (KERP).

Informed sources said executives of the Anglo Meat Packing Co., of which Grove is managing director, were trying to raise the cash.

Grove, 64, was kidnapped last Sunday while driving from his home in Buenos Aires to play a round of golf. He has since written a letter to his wife saying he is being treated well.

S. African Blacks Getting More

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Industrial unrest among blacks in segregated South Africa has been followed by some whopping pay raises.

Thirteen doctors serving the black townships of Johannesburg walked out of their hospital one Saturday complaining of "insulting wages." On Tuesday they were back on the job 300 per cent a month better off.

More significantly, that raise put them on an equal pay footing with white doctors at the same hospital.

Within a few days one of South Africa's largest mining companies, Johannesburg Consolidated Investments, announced 50-per-cent salary raises for its African staff at head office and a promise of increases—"the maximum that is economically feasible"—for its 50,000 African mine workers.

That same day employers in the retail and distributive industries offered increases of up to 46 per cent for black workers, adding the equivalent of $26.34 a month to the minimum wage of $56.87.

The JCI head office staff now will earn an average $171 a month instead of $115.00.

PRICES SHOOT UP

The employers' willingness to give way on such a large scale was in part prompted by one of the worst bouts of inflation this country has seen.

Prices generally have soared 10 per cent this year, but through economic peculiarities and profit-taking by middlemen some basic foodstuffs such as corn, sugar and cooking oil have rocketed.

Employers also know that non-whites can take out grievances spontaneously and violently, as at Port Elizabeth in May, 1971, when hundreds stoned buses after the operators announced fare increases.

The doctors' walkout came at the end of a week during which non-white longshoremen at Durban, Africa's largest port, and Cape Town failed to report for work for three days claiming unsubstantial raises. There was no violence and the longshoremen accepted a promise the government-run wages board would hurry up consideration of their case.

In other places militant demands weren't so well received. Diamond miners at Kimberley struck for higher wages and were promptly arrested. They were contract workers and forbidden to strike.

In Johannesburg, the city council that made concessions to doctors bluntly told black nurses it would be no use them striking. Nursing, said a spokesman, was a prestige job among blacks and the council always had more job applicants than it could handle.

Elsewhere, the government has been encouraging higher wages for Africans who are not allowed to organize themselves in recognized labor unions. A wages board negotiates for them, with a government appointee bidding against the employers.

Deputy Named For Brokers

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald has announced the appointment of E. M. J. Cronin as deputy superintendent of brokers for the province.

Cronin replaces R. A. Scott, who is leaving to take up a position with the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

For the past two years, Cronin has been employed as Crown agent for the government of Alberta at Red Deer.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We deeply appreciate the beautiful floral offerings, charitable donations, cards and messages and the many kindnesses shown in our loss of a beloved wife, mother and grandmother, Marie Grey (Frank Gray); Earl Gray, Florance and William Sheilds, Penni Gray, Beverly and Gordon Dickie, Carol and Darryl Shields, Lorraine and Chum Crabbe and their families.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, messages of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings during the illness and in the sad loss of our beloved husband, father and grandfather, Stanley Bickford. Special thanks to Dr. Whiteside, Dr. McLister, Resthaven Hospital staff and the Central Saanich Volunteer Firemen.—Dorothy Bickford, Norma, Doreen and Sharon and families.

Our sincere thanks to all our relatives, friends and neighbors for their kindness during our recent bereavement. Also to Dr. Vaughan, nurses of Victoria General Hospital, and those who donated to S.P.C.A. — Mrs. Kay Allen and Roberts.

Roland R. Zeitz. Thanks to those who supported him for trustee in School District 61. A wonderful holiday season and a year of happy days to all.

9 IN MEMORIAM

MOORE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Capt. James Edwin Moore who passed away on December 14, 1970.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear
Fond memories linger every day
Remembrance keeps him near.
—Sadly missed by his wife Peggy, daughter Lorraine Potter, son E. Joseph Moore and grandchildren.

MURRELL — In loving memory of William Henry, who passed away December 14, 1968.
The depths of sorrow we cannot tell
Of the loss of one we loved so well;
And while he sleeps a peaceful sleep,
His memory we shall always keep.
—Always remembered by his brother George, sister Frances and Mom.

STEP UP TO A BETTER FUTURE
Do you want financial security and independence? Let me show you how you can earn thousands of dollars selling Real Estate. An interview today could change your entire future. If selected you will be given complete on-the-job training in a program which is considered one of the best in the Real Estate industry. It includes field work, study courses, as well as formal schooling. Through this program men and women without any prior experience have become successful sales people. For further information and an interview call Eric Saffer, recruiting and sales training manager, Wall and Redekop Realty Ltd., 1820 Blanshard Street, 386-8321.

THINGS ARE HAPPENING
If you are a licenced realtor, you may have already heard that "things are happening" at Western Homes. Why not take a few minutes out of your busy schedule to find out how your future can be improved. Our goals and requirements are high and your's should be too! For a "confidential informal discussion" call us today. (Space is limited and only those presently licenced and active need apply.) John Thomson or Jack Davis, Western Homes Ltd., 817 Fort St., 382-2157.

How Pete Was Rescued

In the Reader's Digest recently (July, 1972) there was a remarkable story entitled "What Do You Do With a Boy Like Pete," by Lester Velie. Pete is a young man who in his early years committed one serious crime after another. He robbed his mother of $1,600 — her life savings. He burglarized a dozen offices.

He vandalized the school where he had been a constant truant. He held up a dress shop at gun-point. He "pushed" drugs. He stole four cars, and broke into 100 others. Finally he was caught, and when faced with jail, he confessed to his many crimes.

A court psychiatrist testified that Pete was "a society hater," and the first idea was to lock him up in Florida's most secure prison for minors. But today, many people see that simply locking youngsters up in prison never makes them better citizens — it only served to make them better criminals. Whatever anti-social tendencies they had before are magnified while they are in prison, and their bitterness and frustration with life increases.

Fortunately for Pete, the judge recognized this fact, and so he sent Pete to Volusia House, a converted church in a quiet part of Daytona Beach, Fla., where youngsters in trouble are not merely punished, but are treated in such a way that they can perhaps be helped to be better citizens.

At Volusia House the door was not locked or guarded. Pete was treated in a friendly way, and probably most important, there was a "rap (discussion) group." A group of some 20 boys, who like Pete had been in serious trouble, talked over their problems with one another and tried to help each other — and themselves. They took Pete into the group, and made him answer their many questions.

Pete had his difficulties, but after a while he was studying nights at a neighborhood junior college. Fortunately, he found a good friend in the place, and at last he was fulfilling his need for close involvement with a strong human being. Eventually, Pete said in a meeting, "Everybody makes mistakes and stumbles. It depends on how fast you get up. If you stay down, if you feel sorry for yourself, you're lost."

Of the 54 boys who came through Volusia House the first year, only seven ran away. Three of Volusia's best boys are now working to plant Volusia's self-help type of culture in other communities with treatment centres. This is very important, because according to an FBI report, 40 per cent of the armed robberies, assaults and burglaries in 1970 were committed by boys and girls under 18. More than 1.6 million teen-agers were arrested in 1970, and later, more than half emerged from jails and reform schools to commit more crimes.

SANTA LOOKED DIFFERENT THIS YEAR

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan. (UPI) — Merchants held their breath when the first child climbed onto J. E. Morris' lap at the annual chamber of commerce Christmas festivities and momentarily looked at his face and salt and pepper beard.

The businessmen were worried about what the child, a little girl, might say when she noticed that Morris had a black skin.

Then the girl slowly scrutinized Morris' size 48 costume and 350-pound bulk.

The only thing the tot could be heard to mumble was "he doesn't look the same as last year. He wears a different kind of hat."

Recycle Given Grant

Project Recycle is assured of financial support until the end of February.

The Capital Regional District board, meeting Wednesday, agreed to pay not more than $6,000 to support recycling operations.

"If other support does materialize, it is hoped that further regional expendiutres on this phase of recycling will be avoided," said engineer Bill Gerry.

Gerry said the district has heard unofficially that an application for funds under the local initiatives program has not been approved but that, unofficially, the solid waste management division of Environment Canada has offered a $5,000 grant.

Environment Group

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greater Vancouver Regional District executive Wednesday recommended formation of a regional environmental committee to give the public a chance to present views and participate in issues dealing with pollution problems.

V R D chairman Ron Andrews, mayor of North Vancouver district, said the executive will recommend formal approval by the regional board at its meeting next week.

2 Die in Protests

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Two students died and at least 25 were injured Monday in a five-hour battle between hundreds of students and police in Lahore, capital of Punjab province. Right-wing students violated police orders and marched in protest against recognition of Bangladesh.

Victoria's Daily NEWSPAPERS

ANESTHETIC WARNING ISSUED

NEW YORK (AP) — The anesthetic gases that put patients to sleep for surgery are increasingly suspected of causing harm to operating room nurses and doctors, Dr. Ellis N. Cohen of Stanford University Medical Centre said Wednesday.

Some studies indicate a higher rate of spontaneous miscarriages and of babies born with abnormalities, among nurses and women doctors exposed repeatedly to small amounts of the gases, Dr. Cohen said.

Another study indicates a possibly higher rate of cancer and other diseases of the lymph gland system among both men and women so exposed, he told the New York State Society of Anesthesiologists.

Dr. Cohen made clear he was not talking about risks for the patient who occasionally undergoes surgery and anesthesia, but the personnel who may be almost daily exposed. The harm may come not from the gases themselves, but from breakdown products formed in the body, he said.

Don't Dangle Participles!

CALGARY (CP) — Provincial Judge L. A. Justason is a stickler for correct English, a fact he revealed in court today.

He said he is "on the threshold" of throwing out charges phrased in grammatically incorrect English.

The judge delivered the warning "to constables who dangle their participles' when he refused to proceed with a charge that apparently alleged a motor vehicle had alcohol in its blood.

The charge stated that a 23-year-old Claresholm, Alta., man on Dec. 7 "drove a motor vehicle having consumed alcohol in such quantity" that the amount of alcohol in its blood exceeded the legal limit.

"There is no such offence known to criminal law," said Judge Justason.

"Here we have a motor vehicle that doesn't need gasoline. There is nothing in the criminal code about a vehicle that consumes alcohol or that has blood.

"Why can't these constables (who write the charges) get dangling participles out of their minds?

"The English language is fast becoming a relic to be framed and hung on the wall. Either we should speak the language or bring an interpreter into the court."

Judge Justason warned he was on the verge of quashing, vacating, and setting aside badly-written charges.

The crown prosecutor told court that despite the technical error in the charge "it falls within the ambit of the provisions of the criminal code, and could be proceeded with."

Judge Justason, however, refused to hear the plea of the accused and remanded the case for a week.

When You're Starving Mousemeat Is Honey

Mr. Mavracic isn't so hungry these days and bacon and eggs have replaced his mousemeat diet.

The 44-year-old trapper still is recuperating from an ordeal in the bush north of Sault Ste. Marie. When he ran out of food, he had to fight his way through heavy snow to return to civilization.

A party of snowmobilers found him in a near-delirious state last week. He had been without food for more than 20 days.

He's staying with some friends, 40 miles north of Orillia now, but he's already making plans to return to his trap lines on Grey Owl Lake.

But next time "I will take enough food and supplies to last six months."

FOOD RAN OUT

In an interview Wednesday, he explained that his food had run out about 15 days before he made up his mind to leave his cabin.

"During that time I looked for some game, but heavy snow falling during that time sent all animals to their shelters. Finally I said 'Andy it's time to move out or stay and die.' "

A bush pilot was supposed to have picked Mr. Mavracic up and flown him out, but the ice on the lake was too thin for the aircraft to land.

"There were several mice in the cabin so I sat and waited for one to come out," he said in relating what he did before leaving there. "I shot it with my .22 rifle, then another and another.

"I cooked them over a fire and at that time they tasted like honey, I was so hungry."

When mice became scarce he decided to leave, taking his map, rifle, compass and snowshoes. At no time, he said, was he lost but it was impossible to walk the 44 miles out in a straight line. It took eight days.

Mr. Mavracic, a native of Yugoslavia, said he had to walk around the big hills and gulleys and avoid the deepest drifts.

"I walked day and night, I was afraid to sleep."

Mr. Mavracic credited faith in God for his survival.

PRAYED FOR HELP

"I knew he would help me. . . . I prayed several times. . . . I knew he didn't want to lose me."

He went into the bush last October with $17 worth of food and he had one air drop of flour and sugar since that time.

"I had no idea how long I'd be staying as it would depend on the success of the trap line," he said.

During his long fast, Mr. Mavracic lost 30 pounds. But now, he is gaining it back at the rate of about two pounds a day.

Trade War Feared

OTTAWA (CP) — British Prime Minister Edward Heath has warned that Western nations will "just tear each other apart" unless they short out their trade differences.

"We shall cut each other's throat," he said in an interview taped for the CBC television program Encounter to be broadcast tonight.

"There will be the development of protectionism and this will weaken the security of the Western world as well."

Mr. Heath said the economic future of the Western world depends on three large trade blocs: the European Common Market, the United States and Japan. Britain becomes a member of the European group Jan. 1.

Their task is to work out international trading arrangements that are "agreeable to all of us, and in which we can all share, including Canada."

"Unless we really do that—and it will require a political will as well as technical expertise—. . . we shall just tear each other apart."

Mr. Heath denied that the European Economic Community which Britain is about to join is inward-looking. Its external trade had increased much faster than that of the United States, and "I would think much faster than that of Canada."

Among the developed nations, France devoted the largest proportion of its gross national product to aid for developing countries, with Britain and the Netherlands vying for second place.

The whole European community provides much more for the Third World than either Japan or the United States, said Mr. Heath.

Macdonald Mooting Ombudsman

The B.C. Civil Liberties Association was told Wednesday by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald that the government is considering legislation to establish an ombudsman.

Macdonald said following the meeting with the association that he made no commitment, but an officer commented that he believes the ombudsman will be established.

The association was in Victoria to present its annual brief with a number of requests and recommendations in the civil liberties field.

Dr. Reg. Robson, president, said the delegation was given a good hearing by Macdonald.

Good Old Jeep Costs More Today

DETROIT (AP) — Prices for 1973-model American Motors Corp. passenger cars and Jeep four-wheel-drive vehicles will increase by an average of $38 a vehicle, effective midnight Wednesday night, the company announced Wednesday.

The company said the vehicles ordered by the public but not yet delivered would be sold at current prices.

"The price increase reflects the balance of the approval previously granted by the price commission to cover costs being incurred for the improved bumper systems and emission control and safety requirements which were implemented with introduction of 1973 models," William V. Luneburg, AMC president said.

The average increase of $38 amounts to 1.1 per cent of the average vehicle purchase price, and the price increases range from nothing to a maximum of $49 on passenger cars, and from $25 to $65 on Jeeps.

Ship's Parts Found

Some Observations On Circle of Life

While the garden soil is still too wet, or covered with snow, the gardener must take a different path. This may lead through the woods, along the shore, or — to a demolition lot.

What are we looking for? Sometimes for ideas, sometimes for materials to incorporate into a well-defined garden plan.

From the woodland path we may come home with a better idea of how to reach a simulated woodland on a city lot. By observing the different layers of plant growth we realize the importance of each to the others.

In short, we get a glimmering of the meaning of the Circle of Life.

In practice we may use only one tall tree, two little trees, three shrubs for underbrush, and a half dozen ground-level treasures, but they can well simulate a piece of native woodland.

Our observations will show us the importance of wood debris, fern debris, and mosses. All these things prevent soil erosion and soil depletion.

Until our own little landcape begins to mature we can use some of these introduced devices of conservation.

From the beach, or lake shore, we may harvest a fine piece of wood, weathered in such fantastic detail that it simply must be used as a feature either in a real shore garden, or if small enough, beside a dry pool, of smooth, washed pebbles and drifted sand.

Weathered wood is ideal as background in glass container gardens too; or open dish gardens. Bonsai tree or shrub specimens often depend for realism on a piece of weathered wood to maintain perfect scale.

On Vancouver Island, rock fulfills much the same purpose as weathered wood, for one is as prevalent as the other in our daily lives.

Governed by the use to which it is to be put, a piece of rock may be cleaned, polished, or worked for effect.

But what shall our walk lead to in the demolition lot?

Have you thought of used bricks to build a low hollow wall to edge a path or a patio? Bricks, especially used ones, have a rugged appearance, lending informality to outdoor living areas. They blend with wood but not with stone, nor with stucco. Since this is my own opinion from observation, think it over before discarding the combination.

A patio or sitting-out place beneath trees and out of sight of a stucco house makes a charming picture paved with used brick. Have the garden furniture in wood, not metal.

Brick pedestals for planters, hollow brick tubs, and brick walks for dryness in winter are all possibilities if you get a good buy in used bricks. Moisture drains away from them freely, and cracks between may be planted to add the aura of age.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal is a tough hand, from the viewpoint of the defenders. In the actual play, West got off to the winning opening lead. But then, as it turned out, his lead at trick two enabled our South declarer to fulfil his contract. In the post-mortem analysis, it was revealed that West, had he been clairvoyant, could have made the "killing" lead at trick two.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

Opening lead: King of ♡.

After West's king-of-trumps opening lead had been permitted to win the trick, West continued with the queen of trumps, which South took with his ace. South then cashed his ace and king of diamonds, after which he led a spade, trumping it with the board's remaining trump.

Now came the queen of diamonds, East discarding a club as South tossed away a spade. On the fourth diamond lead, South discarded another spade. And on the fifth diamond lead South discarded his last spade as West ruffed with the jack. At the end, South conceded a club trick to the defenders. His only losers were two trump tricks and a club.

Actually, declarer was very lucky in finding the adversely-held diamonds distributed as they were. Had West possessed two or three diamonds (instead of four), declarer would have had to lose at least one spade trick, since West would then have ruffed the third or fourth diamond lead.

After his king of hearts had captured the opening lead, had West then led a spade to trick two, the four-heart contract would have been defeated. Declarer would have ruffed the spade lead with dummy's next-to-last trump. He would then have cashed the ace and king of diamonds. He would next have ruffed a second spade lead with dummy's last trump.

But when he would now play dummy's queen of diamonds, East would ruff with his remaining trumps, the nine-spot. If declarer overruffed with the ace, West would make three trump tricks all in all. And if declarer discarded a spade on this lead, he would still have a losing spade left and a club loser (and West would still have a trump trick.)

Thus if West, at trick two, had forced dummy to trump a spade, instead of trying to stop dummy from ruffing, declarer would have been down.

Separatists Jailed

ISTANBUL (Reuter) — Seventy persons were given jail terms Tuesday for separatist activities in a province of southeast Turkey. A martial law court in Diyarbakir convicted them of setting up "revolutionary eastern cultural circles." Sentences ranged from 10 months to 15 years. Diyarbakir is one of two provinces with large, officially recognized Kurdish minorities among 11 provinces which are under martial law.

Bond Street Buyer Tops Sotheby's Van Horne Sale

LONDON (CP) — A portrait by the 18th-century English artist George Romney from the Montreal collection of the late Sir William Van Horne was sold today at Sotheby's to a London gallery for £70,000 ($168,000).

The painting of Jane, Duchess of Gordon and Huntly, and her son George, first Marquess of Huntly, was bought by Agnew of Bond Street. A spokesman for the gallery declined to say whether it was acting on behalf of a client.

A second 18th-century portrait from the Van Horne collection, painted by Sir Henry Raeburn, was sold for £4,500 to an agent working on behalf of an anonymous buyer. The subject was another double portrait, of Mrs. Glendower and her daughter.

CHURCH LEADER'S HANGING QUERIED

GENEVA (UPI) — The president of the Presbyterian Church in Mozambique has been found hanged in his prison cell after he underwent six months of interrogation, it was announced Wednesday.

The World Alliance of Reformed Churches said the Rev. Zedequias Manganhela had been imprisoned last June 13 with 30 members of his church.

"As a result of six months of isolation and interrogation he is said to have taken his own life during the night of Dec. 10 to 11," the announcement said.

Officials of the World Alliance said the churchman died from hanging and the United Nations Commission on Human Rights will be asked to find out whether he died by his own hand or not.

Eighty Pounds of Christmas . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — Tiny contingents of Canadian servicemen in remote spots around the world can look forward to exactly the same Christmas dinner this year as they had last December.

The defence department did not even bother changing its news release outlining the menu. Only the date is different.

The 206 men in 13 remote locations will once again each receive 80 pounds of Christmas goodies, made up of 35 sealed items. These include turkey, cranberry sauce, mixed nuts, plum pudding, shortbread, olives, candy, maple syrup and other items.

The Christmas shipments to small teams in Palestine, Islamabad, Pakistan and other places, mainly in the eastern part of the world, have been made for the last eight years by the department.

Whither Comes The Energy?

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to The Times

OTTAWA — A Science Council task force is taking a "long look into the future," to try and determine where Canadians will be obtaining their energy up to and into the 21st Century.

Will it be from fossil fuels? Up until the year 2000, the answer will likely continue to be "yes."

But after that, what will dominate? Nuclear fission as we know it today? Or will it be in a different form?

And what about fusion, described by some experts as the pollution-free energy source of the future? It will likely become the mainstay of the 21st Century. And then there are "windmills, solar panels and a host of geothermal sources of energy that might be tapped to a large extent for the energy requirements of the next generation.

A better view of Canada's medium-term, up to the year 2000, and long-term, into the 21st Century, energy requirements and likely energy sources should be available later next year, when the one-year Science Council task force on energy concludes.

In the meantime, the task force is soliciting written submissions from interested and knowledgeable individuals and organizations in governments, industry and universities, as a part of the energy study.

After the submissions are in, it is hoped by the end of this month, the task force plans to personally follow up the submissions with a cross-Canada tour next spring.

At the end of the study, the task force hopes to be able to advise the government on which sources of energy are expected to be most important at what time in the medium and long-term future.

The task force also expects to advise the government on what future energy sources Canada cannot afford to ignore. This decision may have some bearing on a current proposal before the government to fund a feasibility study of fusion research in Canada, for example.

Then there is the question of research priorities. Should more money be used to perfect advanced technologies using fossil fuels such as coal? Or should more be devoted to nuclear, solar or geothermal sources of power?

Dr. G. N. Patterson, head of the Science Council task force, said that the study will be finished next summer. It will deal with conventional forms of energy conversion, potential energy technology not now being used in Canada, possible adverse environmental effects and ways to minimize or avoid them in energy conversion, and finally economic and social issues as they relate to energy technology.

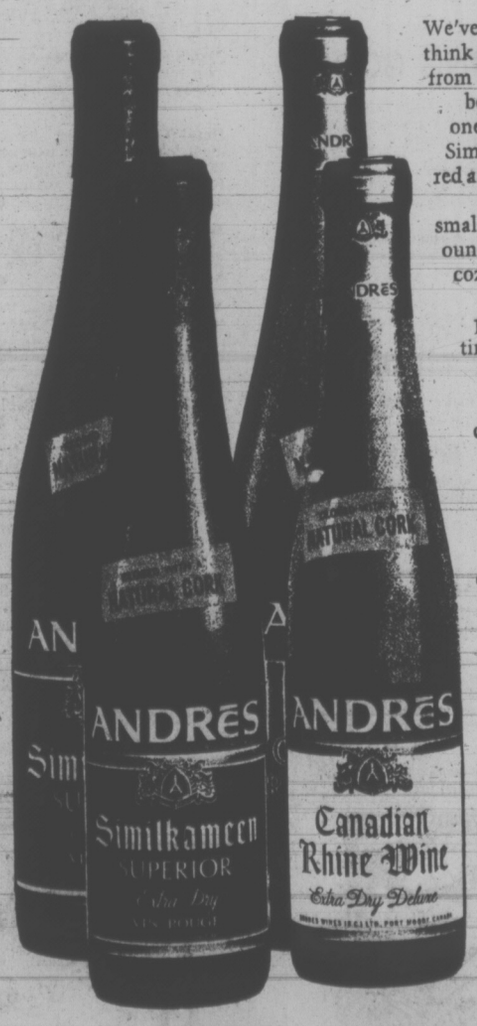
Absence made our hearts think smaller.



We've had a lot of time to think since you last heard from us. And two of our best ideas were small ones. Like offering our Similkameen extra dry red and dry white Rhine-type table wines in smaller bottles. Thirteen ounce splits. Perfect for cozy dinners when she likes white and you prefer red . . . or anytime when a full-sized bottle is too much.

They're naturally corked too, like their 26 ounce big brothers. And breathing easier for it. Which seems a very fitting way to celebrate our return.

After Ceasefire: U.S. Presence in Civilian Disguise?

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — You can almost hear a sigh of relief in the U.S. that the end of the road in Vietnam is near. But, an agreement in Paris will only mean, in fact, that the U.S. has arrived at a new crossroad: Will America take this great opportunity to declare peace and get out of Vietnam? Or will ways be found to stay in, and support Saigon?

The approach of a ceasefire agreement is setting off alarm bells all over Vietnam. They are warning that a ceasefire will not bring peace, but a new phase of the old struggle. Both Vietnamese sides are girding for the coming contest.

This alarm has also been heard in the Pentagon, the state department, and the U.S. mission in Vietnam. Evidence mounts that they are preparing to maintain an active commitment to the Thieu regime.

So once again the executive branch of government is deciding for which road Americans shall take, without the constraint of national debate. And there is no sign that alarms about U.S. post-ceasefire policies are ready to go off in the congress.

While all eyes are on Paris, here is what reliable news sources say is going on in Vietnam:

Hanoi and its southern allies are taking a number of steps to continue the struggle.

U.S. ANALYSIS

North Vietnamese troops may be folded into Viet Cong units to disguise their presence. These units have been issued orders to rely more heavily on captured American weapons, so that they as well as the Saigon regime can live off American supplies — as they did in the late '50s and early '60s.

The Saigon government has been making wholesale arrests of any and all "suspected Viet Cong." Thieu's administrative cadres are touring the countryside to speed preparations against a new outbreak of Communist political and quasi-military activity. A massive influx of American arms is being distributed.

Meanwhile, U.S. planners are putting together the outlines of a new American presence in Vietnam to support the Saigon government after our troops have left. It reportedly would include:

—Ten thousand American civilian technicians and advisers, many under U.S. defence department contracts, to work with Saigon's armed forces. (Advertisements for these jobs have been placed in English language newspapers in Saigon, presumably to recruit retiring U.S. military personnel);

—Possibly hundreds of military attaches assigned to the embassy;

—Four consulate generals, to replace existing regional U.S. headquarters.

—Advisory teams at the province level as well;

—One thousand A.I.D. personnel;

—One hundred Vietnamese or French-speaking foreign service officers on temporary reassignment to Vietnam, reporting on the situation in the countryside;

—And a large-scale military aid program, if the United States succeeds in renegotiating the requirement of the October agreement that military resupply take place only on a one-for-one basis.

In short, the United States is gearing up to

U.S. Pressure Behind Thieu

Times News Services

PARIS — The United States threw its support today behind the Christmas peace package proposed by South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu and accused Hanoi of using "high pressure" tactics in an attempt to impose an incomplete peace settlement.

Heyward Isham, representing the United States at the weekly session of the semi-public Paris peace talks, also told the Communists it was futile for them to continue clamoring for signature of the ceasefire agreement drafted in October by Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho.

"In our country, the high pressure salesman who tries to obtain immediate signature of an incomplete contract only succeeds in arousing suspicion about the transaction," Isham said.

Nixon arranged a meeting for today with his adviser, who returned shortly before midnight Wednesday night from nine days of bargaining iin Paris with Tho.

Asked by reporters to comment on the promise he made seven weeks ago that "peace is at hand," Kissinger replied: "Well, that's a great phrase."

He added that he could not comment on the Paris talks until he had reported to Nixon.

Asked whether there would be peace by Christmas, Kissinger said he did not want to make any predictions.

Nixon's decision to summon Kissinger to Washington was regarded by observers as an indication that a final pact had not been agreed upon, although White House spokesman Ronald Ziegler would give no sign whether or not progress had been made.

Ziegler told reporters Kissinger would remain in contact via cables with Tho who is also leaving Paris, and a decision would be taken later whether and when new talks between them should be held.

Dump Blasted

SAIGON (UPI) — Two Communist commandos blew up South Vietnam's largest ammunition dump today in a series of explosions so powerful they lit up the sky over Saigon and shattered windows in the downtown area.

South Vietnamese command spokesmen said the two Viet Cong guerrillas slipped into the installation shortly before midnight, planted the charges and escaped into darkness although they were fired on by guards at the installation.

Four hours later, the first of four blasts rocked the downtown area and injured an undetermined number of people, most of them by flying glass.

Minor explosions were still erupting 10 hours later.

The spokesmen said the four giant explosions destroyed at least 1,000 tons of munitions — including huge bunkers jammed with artillery and mortar shells, bombs and napalm.

The blasts at the Tuy Ha citadel, just eight miles east of Saigon at Cat Lai port on the Dong Nai River, broke hundreds of windows in the capital and ripped plaster from the ceilings and walls.

PILOTS WARN OF STRIKE

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — The International federation of Airline Pilots' Associations announced here Wednesday night it will call a worldwide strike if airliner hijackings continue next year.

In a communique issued after two days of closed meetings, the pilots said they would not only go on strike as they did last June, but would ask for support from other air transport federations.

They said governments must respect agreements signed in Tokyo and Montreal for the extradition of hijackers.

The federation claims to represent 50,000 airline pilots from 65 countries.

Ottawa Softens Bilingual Rules

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government today tempered its bilingualism policy by issuing a series of nine public service language principles designed to take the problems of unilingual employees and job applicants into account.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury said bilingual positions within the public service will be designated by the end of 1973 and properly occupied by the end of 1978.

The announcement shifted the government's target date for implementing functional bilingualism within the public service from the end of 1975 to the end of 1978 and switched the approach from requiring that a percentage of employees within various categories be bilingual to defining specific jobs as bilingual or unilingual.

One of the main features of the new program is that unilingual persons will be accepted as candidates for bilingual jobs if they are willing to take language courses and achieve the degree of language proficiency demanded by the job within a year.

The principle also guarantees a person currently holding a job security in that job even if it is designated bilingual next year and the employee cannot or does not choose to become bilingual.

Such employees will be given a year's notice that the job is to be designated bilingual, offered up to a year's language training to qualify under the new requirements, and be offered a transfer to an equivalent unilingual job if they didn't try to qualify or are not successful at doing so.

If they do not want to transfer they will be entitled to retain the position — even though it had been designated bilingual — and other personnel will be brought in to meet the bilingual requirements of the job.

Drury said that perhaps 25,000 of the 100,000 federal jobs existing across the country would be designated as bilingual by the end of 1978, although he said his estimate would be impossible to verify until job designation is completed next year.

The government's bilingualism policy has been criticized from two main directions — from unilingual public servants worried about their futures and from segments of the general public who maintain that the whole bilingualism effort is a waste of time and is being rammed down the country's throat.

While making major concessions to the first group, Drury made none to the second.

He said that of 16 million English-speaking Canadians, more than 14 million of them

Hijacker Heading For B.C.

RCMP said the unidentified man was holding a rifle to the head of a stewardess aboard the BAC-111 airliner which had been scheduled to fly from this western Labrador community to Montreal.

The man, described as being about 20 years old, was said to have removed the rifle from a box after he boarded the plane.

All members of the Quebecair crew were from the Montreal area.

RCMP said the man demanded that the plane be flown to Vancouver. He had made no other demands.

The aircraft carried 57 passengers and a crew of five.

Brandt Wins

BONN (AP) — Willy Brandt won formal re-election today in the Bundestag as West German chancellor. Brandt got 269 votes with 223 against him.

LONG JOHN DAYS OVER FOR A WHILE

The forecast is for temperatures in the 40s on Friday and complete clearance of the city's snow by Saturday.

The winds have switched to a westerly, bringing in warmer air off the ocean.

Two storms in the Pacific, however, are expected to hit Victoria together Friday, causing southeasterly winds at nearly gale force in exposed areas and dumping snow on the north coast and wet snow along the south coast of Vancouver Island.

This is expected to turn to rain as the temperature rises.

PHILLIPS

Phillips Leads TEAM In Routing Old Guard

VANCOUVER (CP) — Art Phillips cakewalked into the mayoralty of Canada's third-largest city Wednesday night, leading into power some political neophytes from an organization only four years old.

Phillips, a 42-year-old millionaire investment dealer, became the city's first-ever mayor from The Electors Action Movement (TEAM) and in the process carried enough of his followers into power to break a 25-year-old stranglehold on civic politics held by the rival Non-Partisan Association.

Although votes in the city of Vancouver were not counted, it was apparent Wednesday night that ratepayers in the Greater Vancouver regional hospital district had given overwhelming approval to a $95 million referendum for hospital construction.

TEAM, formed from ratepayers' associations and other groups four years ago, won control of city council, school board and park board as voters turned out the NPA, which had been the power on all three bodies since it was formed 35 years ago to keep the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation out of city hall.

TEAM took eight out of 10 council seats, eight of the nine school board seats and four of the seven park board positions.

But it was Phillips who led the way for his supporters.

He opened a wide lead from the first poll, increased it at every poll thereafter and ended the counting with a margin of more than 52,000 votes over his nearest opponent, winning more than 70 per cent of the vote.

In second place was Brian Campbell of the New Democratic Party, with Angie Dennis of the Committee of Progressive Electors third and independent Gordon Turner last.

Voting was light, with less than 30 per cent of the 265,000 eligible voters turning out for their third election in less than four months.

Another deterrent to a larger turnout was a heavy snowfall which dumped more than three inches of snow on the city.

Some blunders by the opposition and the retirement of Tom Campbell after three two-year terms as mayor helped Phillips win easily.

Campbell said he was stepping down both "for my own good and for the city's," leaving the way clear for Phillips, who will take over as mayor Jan. 1. He had been an alderman since 1968.

Campbell had represented the NPA, which failed to find a candidate to replace him.

The organization originally chose 50-year-old lawyer Bill Street as its mayoral nominee, then suffered acute embarrassment as local media played up a possible conflict of interest between Street's candidacy and his role as advocate before city council on behalf of private enterprise and as the NPA's chief fund-raising bagman.

If Phillips has his way, the election will mark the last time Vancouver voters will be faced with the chore of choosing 10 aldermen, nine school board and seven parks board position.

Astronauts Set To Head Home

HOUSTON (CP) — Eugene Cernan stepped off the moon today, leaving in the lunar sand perhaps the last footprint of the generation which first challenged space. Exploration by the Apollo moonships ended with Cernan's last words from the dusty surface before preparing for blastoff to earth: "Godspeed the crew of Apollo 17."

The lift-off was scheduled for 2:56 p.m. today, Victoria time.

". . . As I take these last steps from the surface back home, for some time to come," Cernan said before entering the Apollo landing ship Challenger, "I believe history will record that America's challenge of today has forged man's destiny of tomorrow.'

Then he added: "And as we leave the moon and Taurus-Littrow we leave as we came, and, God willing, we shall return, with peace and hope for all mankind. Godspeed the crew of Apollo 17."

Turning, Cernan then followed his crewmate, Harrison

LOWER FARES BUT NO WAR

Times News Services

GENEVA — Lower air fares are in prospect for trans-Atlantic travellers following the breakdown of the international airlines' price-fixing machinery, although an all-out price war is not expected.

The International Air Transport Association announced Wednesday that scheduled airlines flying between the United States and Europe can set their own fares in open competition starting Feb. 1.

Meanwhile, United Air Lines announced Wednesday that a plan will go into effect next June which will allow passengers to fly between certain points in the United States at charter rates — about 50 per cent below normal fares.

United said that next year it would fly DC-8s at charter rates between New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Las Vegas and Honolulu.

Under the plan, the round-trip fare between New York and Los Angeles would be $129; at present it is $336.

It would cost $229 to fly round trip between New York and Honolulu, compared with the present $468.

To fly at the special rates, a passenger would have to buy a ticket at least 90 days before the day of travel.

The ticket would have to be bought from Trade Winds Tours of Hawaii, a travel agency which is United's partner in the venture.

The 40 airlines flying the North Atlantic and major connecting routes failed to agree on new rates after five months of negotiations.

U.S. lines wanted higher fares to offset the business they are losing to cheap-rate charter lines; the Europeans argued that the answer was lower fares to fill up the big planes they now are flying with many empty seats.

Erickson Likely Overseer of Harbor Plan

City council was expected to approve this afternoon the appointment of internationally-known architect Arthur Erickson as design "overseer" for the integrated redevelopment of several key sites dotted around the Inner Harbor.

Erickson, 48, of Vancouver, who designed the highly-praised Canadian pavilion at Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan, will likely be commissioned for $35,000, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

The proposal at today's meeting of council is little more than a formality requiring official endorsement, as the matter has already been considered by aldermen in committee.

Pollen said the relevant resolution recognizes the "great progress" that has been made in the whole Inner Harbor area, with the acquisition of the Ocean Cement site and the impending shift to public control and use of other important stretches of waterfront.

Erickson's commission, he said, will be to prepare "conceptual plans" in the framework of an over-all plan for the Inner Harbor, including privately-developed sites as well as those projects which will be undertaken by the public sector.

He said council is aware that $35,000 is a lot of money to spend on this master-plan, but considering the international reputation and high calibre of the architect, and the importance of the harbor's future to the city, "we feel it is money well worth spending."

In addition to the Ocean Cement which it already owns, and which will be vacated by the spring of 1973, the city is now negotiating for the purchase of the waterfront property across the water owned by Marathon Realty, the Canadian Pacific subsidiary.

Agreement on price is expected soon, and from recent talks between city representatives and cabinet ministers in the provincial government the indications are that the province will help with funds.

Negotiations are also going well with Imperial Oil for the acquisition of the Causeway garage adjacent to the Black Ball ferry terminal.

The terminal itself is on land leased from the provincial government, and the city hopes to regain control of this when the firm relocates.

Other recent developments indicating that the long-mooted Inner Harbor renewal plan is really starting to gell were:

—Allocation of $280,000 by the provincial government for construction of a water-level promenade along the Causeway in front of the Empress.

—The announcement this week that Bapco Paint Ltd. is vacating its site at Laurel Point, which will be developed as a hotel-apartment-recreation complex.

All these pieces in the harbor jigsaw will be assembled by Erickson, Pollen said, adding "He has expressed a strong desire to become personally involved in the future of the Inner Harbor.

Among other projects, Erickson has designed the Man in the Community pavilion at Expo 67 in Montreal, the mountain-top Simon Fraser University in Burnaby and the MacMillan Bloedel office tower in Vancouver.

While Population Grows, Birth, Death Rate Drops

Victoria Times
SECOND SECTION

Greater Victoria's senior public health officer has underlined again the staff shortage he has complained about repeatedly in recent years.

With half a month left in 1972, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread has issued the annual report of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health for 1971.

Health board staff cover the capital region from Jordan River to the Gulf Islands and the annual report takes the pulse of Greater Victoria in many areas — from the rate babies are being born and old people are dying to the incidence of venereal disease, chickenpox and illegitimate births.

While the population of Greater Victoria continues to climb — from 154,000 in 1962 to 204,500 at the end of 1971 — the rate at which people are being born and dying is dropping.

The birth rate per 1,000 population has decreased from 23.1 in 1962 to 12.8 in 1971 and Whitbread cites three possible reasons: publicity on the population explosion, increasing availability of contraceptive means and a change in the public idea of the ideal-sized family.

While the number of deaths in 1962 was 1,931 and this has climbed to 2,220 last year, the death rate per 1,000 population has fallen from 12.5 a decade ago to 10.8 in 1971.

"Life expectancy has increased and many of our elderly citizens living in their own homes, boarding homes, nursing homes . . . are over 80 years of age."

Cardiac disease was the major cause of death through the district in 1971, claiming 774, with malignancies second at 480. Death by accident, including traffic accidents, ranked fifth with 119 killed, while suicides were eighth with 35.

"The number of illegitimate births has changed very little in the past 10 years," the report says, "when related to total population, and has increased from 1.4 illegitimate births per 1,000 population in 1962 to 1.6 per 1,000 population in 1971."

Victoria had most of these, with 143 from a population of 60,897. Saanich, with a population of 65,052, had 65. There were 10 in Oak Bay and 18 in Esquimalt.

Among communicable diseases reported to the health board, mumps soared to 453 cases last year from 110 in 1970. Chickenpox dropped from 351 cases in 1970 to 236 last year and measles plummeted to 10 cases reported last year from 49 in 1970.

There were 250 cases of gonorrhea and 30 of syphilis in Greater Victoria last year, up fractionally from the year before.

But the ratio of cases to population is far lower in Greater Victoria than the provincial average and only about a quarter the ratio found in Greater Vancouver.

The ratio of gonorrhoea cases per 100,000 of population in Greater Victoria was 125 while it was 324 for B.C. and 516 in Greater Vancouver.

Among the variety of services conducted or supervised by the health board staff are sewage disposal and food outlet inspections, clinics for preschoolers, expectant parents, for immunization and transient youth, home nursing and inspection of rest homes.

NO CUT FOR LESS WORK

Employees of Woodward Department Stores will shift to a 37½-hour work week from 40 hours this spring with no reduction in pay, it was announced Wednesday.

The company decision applies to its nine stores in B.C. and six in Alberta.

Harold Joy, vice-president of personnnel, said part-time employees also will not suffer financially because their pay is based on their proportion of the full work week and salary.

Joy said "oh heaven's no, that would be most unpopular" when asked if the company's decision to reduce working hours was to save money on salaries, especially with the new $2 minimum wage. He said the lowest hourly wage in Woodwards is $2.15.

The change directly affects 5,500 full-time staff but altogether 14,500 to 15,000 with part-timers, he said. In Victoria, approximately 350 are affected.

Joy said the reason for the change is because Woodwards has "always led the way in employee benefits. Woodwards was the first to go to 40 hours." It is the first major retailer to move to 37½ hours, he said.

With the 37½-hour work week, the maximum work day will be 7½ hours instead of eight. No specific date has been chosen in the spring for the change.

Ring Thief Blames Drugs for Crime

A 20-year-old man was sentenced to six months definite and six months indeterminate by Judge William Ostler in provincial court today after pleading guilty to stealing rings worth a total of $1,249 from a downtown jewelry shop Tuesday.

Blaire Fraser Dickson, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of theft over $200.

Dickson was arrested Tuesday on a Vancouver warrant by two Victoria drug squad members who recognized him. By coincidence the officers were near the store, Grassie Firbanks Jewelers, 1209 Douglas, when the robbery occurred at 2:15 p.m.

In court today Dickson admitted he was a heroin addict.

In sentencing, Ostler said he saw heroin as "the most compelling reason" for Dickson's thefts. The judge said he hoped the accused would serve part of his sentence in a forestry camp, where the new environment would help separate the young man from his addiction.

Alexander Resumes Post

H. L. Alexander, assistant general manager of Victoria Press Ltd., will resume the additional duties of director of advertising on January 1, J. C. Melville, general manager, announced today.

Alexander relinquished his advertising post October 2, 1969, to act as owner's representative during construction of the new Victoria Press building.

J. A. Hamilton, who was acting director of advertising during this period, becomes assistant to the vice-president, Victoria Press Ltd., on Jan. 1.

More Funds Urged For UVic Athletics

More money should be allocated to athletic activities at the university, according to UVic senate commission report released Wednesday.

The report, commissioned by President Hugh Farquhar as a guideline for future academic development of the university, says the student body should be encouraged to increase its contribution to support of athletic programs.

Sports on campus are funded through a certain proportion of students' Alma Mater Society fees which are matched by a contribution from the administration.

"The present AMS fee of $6," the report says, "is well below that allocated to athletic activities at many other Canadian universities. The average across Canada is $15."

The report says the university has used the stadium very little for its own sports purposes with non-university bodies accounting for 95 per cent of its use.

The university however assumes the greatest share of the stadium's operating costs.

It costs $30,000 a year to run the stadium, with $10,000 provided by the municipalities, $3,000 collected in rental fees and the rest paid for by the university.

Wallace Elected UVic Chancellor

Robert Wallace, a 40-year veteran in Victoria's university community, was elected chancellor of Uvic by a landslide vote of the convocation tabulated Tuesday.

Wallace, who received more votes than the other four candidates combined, will succeed Roderick Haig-Brown as titular head of the university.

When he retired as professor and vice-president of UVic in 1971, it was said by a fellow faculty member: "in the mind of the public Bob Wallace was the university."

Wallace started as a student at Victoria College in 1933. He moved with it to the Lansdowne campus in 1946 and to Gordon Head campus in 1962

The 66-year-old Wallace was presented with a UVic Alumni Award in 1969 for "his outstanding service to the cause of higher education" and was elected man of the year by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce last October.

The new chancellor received 958 votes in the convocation election and was followed by Willard Ireland launched by the Security (326), Robert Molson (171), William Featherstone (77) and David Conover (60).

Also elected were six convocation representatives on the university senate: C. Hilary Butler, David Dunsmuir, Charles Gregory, K. R. Thornton, S. A. Van der Voort and K. O. Wright.

Set Entrance Standards— UVic Study

A major study on academic development at the University of Victoria says entrance standards "appear to be as low as any in Canada" and recommends entrance exams by 1974.

It is one of 59 proposals in a report released Wednesday night to the senate. Titled Report of the Commission on Academic Development, it culminates six months of hearings and study which has prompted a good deal of speculation on its findings.

Created in February to establish guidelines for the university's future academic development, the commission, under vice-president D. J. MacLaurin, came up with two major recommendations.

Firstly, "that the University of Victoria should be a relatively small institution pursuing the highest standards and specializing in those fields in which it has particular advantages."

And secondly, "that the academic offerings of the University of Victoria should be available for and be of service to the broadest possible spectrum of the whole community . . ."

Another recommendation to combine all modern languages into a single university department, one of 59 proposals in a major UVic commission report released Wednesday, has been termed "backward" by language professors.

"This recommendation was made by people ignorant of the modern language area," Terry Rickwood, head of the department of Slavonic and Oriental studies said today.

"No self-respecting university would do this," Rickwood said, "it's a retrogressive step without any rationale."

Faculty Association president John Greene also criticized the recommendation and said the association would consider the entire report in depth and "take a stand" on its proposals.

"Serious deficiencies" in the standard of work produced by graduate students in certain departments was cited by the commission which recommended supervisory committees be created to review graduate students' work.

Dean of Graduate Studies Sam Jennings said today he didn't know the rationale behind such criticisms and would not comment on the recommendations without further study of the report.

The commission also recommends graduate faculties "revise present policies relating to directed reading courses" suggesting that students performance in these courses should be more adequately assessed.

Arbitrarily raising the entrance standards, to a C-plus average for example, is not the solution, the commission says, since there is a wide variation in course grading among high schools.

The report also advises there be a university official responsible for continual investigation of course grades, methods of evaluation and graduating standards.

Evaluation of professors and teaching effectiveness also came under the commission's scrutiny with a recommendation that each department be required to make a formal annual review of the teaching effectiveness of each instructor.

Where Do We Find New Jobs, Bapco Workers Ask

By
ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

When an industrial plant decides to shut down, it's people who are hurt.

Some companies just cut and run. No notice, no consultation — to heck with the employees.

Bapco Paint Limited is different. It is being responsible — notice, relocation pay, co-operation with Canada Manpower, discussions with employees.

But it's still a plant closure, and people are hurt.

What will a 60-year-old man do, with a semi-skilled trade and no pension?

Or a 35-year-old father with four children who can't see finding another $700 a month job in Victoria?

Between now and almost a year from now, between 90 and 105 Bapco workers are going to have to adjust — to new jobs, new towns, loss of pay — maybe no job at all. The stabilizing forces — job, house, hometown, family — are thrown into upheaval.

Last night, the members of Local 1947 of the International Brotherhood of Painters and Allied Trades held their regular monthly meeting — ironically on the 13th of the month, and 36 hours after Bapco announced it is shutting down its 66-year-old Victoria factory and moving to Surrey.

The company said it had to move because the present location and limited space makes modernization impractical, and because of disadvantages of being on Vancouver Island when major markets are on the mainland.

Forty employees (half from the plant, half from the office) will move with the company, 10 will retire early and the rest will be laid off. The union represents the plant workers, roughly 90.

The questions on their minds as Local 1947 president Owen Williams opened the meeting were the bread and butter ones — severance pay, seniority, pensions, jobs.

Williams said the severance pay — the company calls it relocation allowances, he calls it "conscience money" — is one week's pay for every year's service, with a minimum service of two years to qualify, plus one week for every year over the age of 40, with a ceiling of 52 weeks benefit.

He says it is "reasonably generous." It is — the union has no severance pay provision in its contract.

What happens to my severance pay if I leave the company between now and when the plant finally closes, asks one member. Williams notes it down. Someone says that everyone should get severance pay whenever they leave — it's a credit for past loyalty and long service.

What are the ground rules for transfers to Surrey? The interviews start next week. It seems likely only the highly skilled will be taken.

What happens to Local 1947? The certification address should be changed.

The contract expires next November. Williams, who doesn't expect to go to Surrey, says negotiations should go ahead as normal. The bylaws will need changing, he adds.

"Where are people going to get jobs at $4 and $5 an hour in this town?" No one knows.

"You have a fairly good wage scale down there compared with the tourist industry in town," says Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan.

He says it is a "tragic situation," a familiar one in Ontario and Quebec, "the uprooting of people's lives."

Some Bapco men will lose half their pay by accepting new jobs in Victoria, says one member.

"All there is in this town is low paid unskilled jobs. Ninety people have got to get new jobs. If 25 find jobs in this town this time next year they'll be lucky."

What happens to the pension plan? The employees can get their contributions back plus three per cent, or leave it in and draw it out at 65, says Williams.

More questions. About MSA and group insurance. Does Bapco seniority in Victoria transfer to Bapco in Vancouver. All the questions are noted. The company will be asked. The members will be told.

It is apparent there is a good relationship between local workers and local managers. Bapco president J. R. Law is always called "Bob Law." Never "Mr. Law." But plant shutdowns aren't decided at this level.

"Some guy in an ivory tower in Montreal has the power of life or death over my job here. We're going to have to fight the corporations on a global basis."

Someone mentions that unions are talking of a global strike against Dunlop. The parallel with paintmaking is drawn immediately. Bapco is owned by Canadian Industries Limited. CIL is owned by Imperial Chemical Industries, the giant British company.

A corporate rationalization has been made far away, and no one in Victoria can do anything about it. Unions must think globally, the meeting is told.

Larry Ryan worries about the decline of secondary industry in Victoria. Where will be the jobs for tomorrow's workers?

"The same logic that moves Bapco to Vancouver would move industry from British Columbia to Ontario," he says. Again the theme — world-wide measures by unions to confront multi-national corporations.

The mood of the meeting is serious, but not one of despair. The corporate economic realities are perceived. The bread and butter questions are raised. The union will do what it can.

There is even humor, or perhaps pathos. The annual Christmas party will be held this Saturday. The local votes $100 towards the cost, and someone cracks: "It's being referred to as the last supper."

Erickson Likely Overseer of Harbor Plan

City council was expected to approve this afternoon the appointment of internationally-known architect Arthur Erickson as design "overseer" for the integrated redevelopment of several key sites dotted around the Inner Harbor.

Erickson, 48, of Vancouver, who designed the highly-praised Canadian pavilion at Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan, will likely be commissioned for $35,000, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

The proposal at today's meeting of council is little more than a formality requiring official endorsement, as the matter has already been considered by aldermen in committee.

Pollen said the relevant resolution recognizes the "great progress" that has been made in the whole Inner Harbor area, with the acquisition of the Ocean Cement site and the impending shift to public control and use of other important stretches of waterfront.

Erickson's commission, he said, will be to prepare "conceptual plans" in the framework of an over-all plan for the Inner Harbor, including privately-developed sites as well as those projects which will be undertaken by the public sector.

He said council is aware that $35,000 is a lot of money to spend on this master-plan, but considering the international reputation and high calibre of the architect, and the importance of the harbor's future to the city, "we feel it is money well worth spending."

In addition to the Ocean Cement which it already owns, and which will be vacated by the spring of 1973, the city is now negotiating for the purchase of the waterfront property across the water owned by Marathon Realty, the Canadian Pacific subsidiary.

Agreement on price is expected soon, and from recent talks between city representatives and cabinet ministers in the provincial government the indications are that the province will help with funds.

Negotiations are also going well with Imperial Oil for the acquisition of the Causeway garage adjacent to the Black Ball ferry terminal.

The terminal itself is on land leased from the provincial government, and the city hopes to regain control of this when the firm relocates.

Other recent developments indicating that the long-mooted Inner Harbor renewal plan is really starting to gell were:

--Allocation of $280,000 by the provincial government for construction of a water-level promenade along the Causeway in front of the Empress.

—The announcement this week that Bapco Paint Ltd. is vacating its site at Laurel Point, which will be developed as a hotel-apartment-recreation complex.

All these pieces in the harbor jigsaw will be assembled by Erickson, Pollen said, adding "He has expressed a strong desire to become personally involved in the future of the Inner Harbor.

Among other projects, Erickson has designed the Man in the Community pavilion at Expo 67 in Montreal, the mountain-top Simon Fraser University in Burnaby and the MacMillan Bloedel office tower in Vancouver.

While Population Grows, Birth, Death Rate Drops

Greater Victoria's senior public health officer has underlined again the staff shortage he has complained about repeatedly in recent years.

With half a month left in 1972, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread has issued the annual report of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health for 1971.

Health board staff cover the capital region from Jordan River to the Gulf Islands and the annual report takes the pulse of Greater Victoria in many areas — from the rate babies are being born and old people are dying to the incidence of venereal disease, chickenpox and illegitimate births.

While the population of Greater Victoria continues to climb — from 154,000 in 1962 to 204,500 at the end of 1971 — the rate at which people are being born and dying is dropping.

The birth rate per 1,000 population has decreased from 23.1 in 1962 to 12.8 in 1971 and Whitbread cites three possible reasons: publicity on the population explosion, increasing availability of contraceptive means and a change in the public idea of the ideal-sized family.

While the number of deaths in 1962 was 1,931 and this has climbed to 2,220 last year, the death rate per 1,000 population has fallen from 12.5 a decade ago to 10.8 in 1971.

"Life expectancy has increased and many of our elderly citizens living in their own homes, boarding homes, nursing homes . . . are over 80 years of age."

Cardiac disease was the major cause of death through the district in 1971, claiming 774, with malignancies second at 480. Death by accident, including traffic accidents, ranked fifth with 119 killed, while suicides were eighth with 35.

"The number of illegitimate births has changed very little in the past 10 years," the report says, "when related to total population, and has increased from 1.4 illegitimate births per 1,000 population in 1962 to 1.6 per 1,000 population in 1971."

Victoria had most of these, with 143 from a population of 60,897. Saanich, with a population of 65,052, had 65. There were 10 in Oak Bay and 18 in Esquimalt.

Among communicable diseases reported to the health board, mumps soared to 453 cases last year from 110 in 1970. Chickenpox dropped from 351 cases in 1970 to 236 last year and measles plummeted to 10 cases reported last year from 49 in 1970.

There were 250 cases of gonorrhea and 30 of syphilis in Greater Victoria last year, up fractionally from the year before.

But the ratio of cases to population is far lower in Greater Victoria than the provincial average and only about a quarter the ratio found in Greater Vancouver.

The ratio of gonorrhoea cases per 100,000 of population in Greater Victoria was 125 while it was 324 for B.C. and 516 in Greater Vancouver.

Among the variety of services conducted or supervised by the health board staff are sewage disposal and food outlet inspections, clinics for preschoolers, expectant parents, for immunization and transient youth, home nursing and inspection of rest homes.

More Funds Urged For UVic Athletics

More money should be allocated to athletic activities at the university, according to UVic senate commission report released Wednesday.

The report, commissioned by president Hugh Farquhar as a guideline for future academic development of the university, says the student body should be encouraged to increase its contribution to support of athletic programs.

Sports on campus are funded through a certain proportion of students' Alma Mater Society fees which are matched by a contribution from the administration.

"The present AMS fee of $6," the report says, "is well below that allocated to athletic activities at many other Canadian universities. The average across Canada is $15."

The report says the university has used the stadium very little for its own sports purposes with non-university bodies accounting for 95 per cent of its use.

The university however assumes the greatest share of the stadium's operating costs.

It costs $30,000 a year to run the stadium, with $10,000 provided by the municipalities, $3,000 collected in rental fees and the rest paid for by the university.

Set Entrance Standards— UVic Study

A major study on academic development at the University of Victoria says entrance standards "appear to be as low as any in Canada" and recommends entrance exams by 1974.

It is one of 59 proposals in a report released Wednesday night to the senate. Titled Report of the Commission on Academic Development, it is the culmination of six months of hearings and study which has prompted a good deal of speculation on its findings.

Created in February to establish guidelines for the university's future academic development, the commission, under vice-president D. J. MacLaurin, came up with two major recommendations.

Firstly, "that the University of Victoria should be a relatively small institution pursuing the highest standards and specializing in those fields in which it has particular advantages."

And secondly, "that the academic offerings of the University of Victoria should be available for and be of service to the broadest possible spectrum of the whole community . . ."

Another recommendation to combine all modern languages into a single university department, has been termed "backward" by language professors.

"This recommendation was made by people ignorant of the modern language area," Terry Rickwood, head of the department of Slavonic and Oriental studies said today.

"No self-respecting university would do this," Rickwood said, "it's a retrogressive step without any rationale."

Faculty association president John Greene also criticized the recommendation and said the association would consider the entire report in depth and "take a stand" on its proposals.

"Serious deficiencies" in the standard of work produced by graduate students in certain departments was cited by the commission which recommended supervisory committees be created to review graduate students' work.

Dean of Graduate Studies Sam Jennings said today he didn't know the rationale behind such criticisms and would not comment on the recommendations without further study of the report.

The commission also recommends graduate faculties "revise present policies relating to directed reading courses" suggesting that students performance in these courses should be more adequately assessed.

Arbitrarily raising the entrance standards, to a C-plus average for example, is not the solution, the commission says, since there is a wide variation in course grading among high schools.

The report also advises there be a university official responsible for continual investigation of course grades, methods of evaluation and graduating standards.

Evaluation of professors and teaching effectiveness also came under the commission's scrutiny with a recommendation that each department be required to make a formal annual review of the teaching effectiveness of each instructor.

NO CUT FOR LESS WORK

Employees of Woodward Department Stores will shift to a 37½-hour work week from 40 hours this spring with no reduction in pay, it was announced Wednesday.

The company decision applies to its nine stores in B.C. and six in Alberta.

Harold Joy, vice-president of personnnel, said part-time employees also will not suffer financially because their pay is based on their proportion of the full work week and salary.

Joy said "oh heaven's no, that would be most unpopular" when asked if the company's decision to reduce working hours was to save money on salaries, especially with the new $2 minimum wage. He said the lowest hourly wage in Woodwards is $2.15.

The change directly affects 5,500 full-time staff but altogether 14,500 to 15,000 with part-timers, he said. In Victoria, approximately 350 are affected.

Joy said the reason for the change is because Woodwards has "always led the way in employee benefits. Woodwards was the first to go to 40 hours." It is the first major retailer to move to 37½ hours, he said.

With the 37½-hour work week, the maximum work day will be 7½ hours instead of eight. No specific date has been chosen in the spring for the change.

Ring Thief Blames Drugs for Crime

A 20-year-old man was sentenced to six months definite and six months indeterminate by Judge William Ostler in provincial court today after pleading guilty to stealing rings worth a total of $1,249 from a downtown jewelry shop Tuesday.

Blaire Fraser Dickson, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of theft over $200.

Dickson was arrested Tuesday on a Vancouver warrant by two Victoria drug squad members who recognized him. By coincidence the officers were near the store, Grassie Firbanks Jewelers, 1209 Douglas, when the robbery occurred at 2:15 p.m.

In court today Dickson admitted he was a heroin addict.

In sentencing, Ostler said he saw heroin as "the most compelling reason" for Dickson's thefts. The judge said he hoped the accused would serve part of his sentence in a forestry camp, where the new environment would help separate the young man from his addiction.

Alexander Resumes Post

H. L. Alexander, assistant general manager of Victoria Press Ltd., will resume the additional duties of director of advertising on January 1, J. C. Melville, general manager, announced today.

Alexander relinquished his advertising post October 2, 1969, to act as owner's representative during construction of the new Victoria Press building.

J. A. Hamilton, who was acting director of advertising during this period, becomes assistant to the vice-president, Victoria Press Ltd., on Jan. 1.

Wallace Elected UVic Chancellor

Robert Wallace, a 40-year veteran in Victoria's university community, was elected chancellor of UVic by a landslide vote of the convocation tabulated Tuesday.

Wallace, who received more votes than the other four candidates combined, will succeed Roderick Haig-Brown as titular head of the university.

When he retired as professor and vice-president of UVic in 1971, it was said by a fellow faculty member: "in the mind of the public Bob Wallace was the university."

Wallace started as a student at Victoria College in 1933. He moved with it to the Lansdowne campus in 1946 and to Gordon Head campus in 1962

The 66-year-old Wallace was presented with a UVic Alumni Award in 1969 for "his outstanding service to the cause of higher education" and was elected man of the year by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce last October.

The new chancellor received 958 votes in the convocation election and was followed by Willard Ireland launched by the Security (326), Robert Molson (171), William Featherstone (77) and David Conover (60).

Also elected were six convocation representatives on the university senate: C. Hilary Butler, David Dunsmuir, Charles Gregory, K. R. Thornton, S. A. Van der Voort and K. O. Wright.

Where Do We Find New Jobs, Bapco Workers Ask

By
ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

When an industrial plant decides to shut down, it's people who are hurt.

Some companies just cut and run. No notice, no consultation — to heck with the employees.

Bapco Paint Limited is different. It is being responsible — notice, relocation pay, cooperation with Canada Manpower, discussions with employees.

But it's still a plant closure, and people are hurt.

What will a 60-year-old man do, with a semi-skilled trade and no pension?

Or a 35-year-old father with four children who can't see finding another $700 a month job in Victoria?

Between now and almost a year from now, between 90 and 105 Bapco workers are going to have to adjust — to new jobs, new towns, loss of pay — maybe no job at all. The stabilizing forces — job, house, hometown, family — are thrown into upheaval.

Last night, the members of Local 1947 of the International Brotherhood of Painters and Allied Trades held their regular monthly meeting — ironically on the 13th of the month, and 36 hours after Bapco announced it is shutting down its 66-year-old Victoria factory and moving to Surrey.

The company said it had to move because the present location and limited space makes modernization impractical, and because of disadvantages of being on Vancouver Island when major markets are on the mainland.

Forty employees (half from the plant, half from the office) will move with the company, 10 will retire early and the rest will be laid off. The union represents the plant workers, roughly 90.

The questions on their minds as Local 1947 president Owen Williams opened the meeting were the bread and butter ones — severance pay, seniority, pensions, jobs.

Williams said the severance pay — the company calls it relocation allowances, he calls it "conscience money" — is one week's pay for every year's service, with a minimum service of two years to qualify, plus one week for every year over the age of 40, with a ceiling of 52 weeks benefit.

He says it is "reasonably generous." It is — the union has no severance pay provision in its contract.

What happens to my severance pay if I leave the company between now and when the plant finally closes, asks one member. Williams notes it down. Someone says that everyone should get severance pay whenever they leave — it's a credit for past loyalty and long service.

What are the ground rules for transfers to Surrey? The interviews start next week. It seems likely only the highly skilled will be taken.

What happens to Local 1947? The certification address should be changed.

The contract expires next November. Williams, who doesn't expect to go to Surrey, says negotiations should go ahead as normal. The bylaws will need changing, he adds.

"Where are people going to get jobs at $4 and $5 an hour in this town?" No one knows.

"You have a fairly good wage scale down there compared with the tourist industry in town," says Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan.

He says it is a "tragic situation," a familiar one in Ontario and Quebec, "the uprooting of people's lives."

Some Bapco men will lose half their pay by accepting new jobs in Victoria, says one member.

"All there is in this town is low paid unskilled jobs. Ninety people have got to get new jobs. If 25 find jobs in this town this time next year they'll be lucky."

What happens to the pension plan? The employees can get their contributions back plus three per cent, or leave it in and draw it out at 65, says Williams.

More questions. About MSA and group insurance. Does Bapco seniority in Victoria transfer to Bapco in Vancouver. All the questions are noted. The company will be asked. The members will be told.

It is apparent there is a good relationship between local workers and local managers. Bapco president J. R. Law is always called "Bob Law." Never "Mr. Law." But plant shutdowns aren't decided at this level.

"Some guy in an ivory tower in Montreal has the power of life or death over my job here. We're going to have to fight the corporations on a global basis," a man said.

Someone mentions that unions are talking of a global strike against Dunlop. The parallel with paintmaking is drawn immediately. Bapco is owned by Canadian Industries Limited. CIL is owned by Imperial Chemical Industries, the giant British company.

A corporate rationalization has been made far away, and no one in Victoria can do anything about it. Unions must think globally, the meeting is told.

Larry Ryan worries about the decline of secondary industry in Victoria. Where will be the jobs for tomorrow's workers?

"The same logic that moves Bapco to Vancouver would move industry from British Columbia to Ontario," he says. Again the theme — world-wide measures by unions to confront multi-national corporations.

The mood of the meeting is serious, but not one of despair. The corporate economic realities are perceived. The bread and butter questions are raised. The union will do what it can.

There is even humor, or perhaps pathos. The annual Christmas party will be held this Saturday. The local votes $100 towards the cost, and someone cracks: "It's being referred to as the last supper."

After Ceasefire: U.S. Presence in Civilian Disguise?

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — You can almost hear a sigh of relief in the U.S. that the end of the road in Vietnam is near. But, an agreement in Paris will only mean, in fact, that the U.S. has arrived at a new crossroad: Will America take this great opportunity to declare peace and get out of Vietnam? Or will ways be found to stay in, and support Saigon?

The approach of a ceasefire agreement is setting off alarm bells all over Vietnam. They are warning that a ceasefire will not bring peace, but a new phase of the old struggle. Both Vietnamese sides are girding for the coming contest.

This alarm has also been heard in the Pentagon, the state department, and the U.S. mission in Vietnam. Evidence mounts that they are preparing to maintain an active commitment to the Thieu regime.

So once again the executive branch of government is deciding for which road Americans shall take, without the constraint of national debate. And there is no sign that alarms about U.S. post-ceasefire policies are ready to go off in the congress.

While all eyes are on Paris, here is what reliable news sources say is going on in Vietnam:

Hanoi and its southern allies are taking a number of steps to continue the struggle.

U.S. ANALYSIS

North Vietnamese troops may be folded into Viet Cong units to disguise their presence. These units have been issued orders to rely more heavily on captured American weapons, so that they as well as the Saigon regime can live off American supplies — as they did in the late '50s and early '60s.

The Saigon government has been making wholesale arrests of any and all "suspected Viet Cong." Thieu's administrative cadres are touring the countryside to speed preparations against a new outbreak of Communist political and quasi-military activity. A massive influx of American arms is being distributed.

Meanwhile, U.S. planners are putting together the outlines of a new American presence in Vietnam to support the Saigon government after U.S. troops have left. It reportedly would include:

—Ten thousand American civilian technicians and advisers, many under U.S. defence department contracts, to work with Saigon's armed forces. (Advertisements for these jobs have been placed in English language newspapers in Saigon, presumably to recruit retiring U.S. military personnel);

—Possibly hundreds of military attaches assigned to the embassy;

—Advisory teams at the province level as well;

—One thousand A.I.D. personnel;

—One hundred Vietnamese or French-speaking foreign service officers on temporary reassignment to Vietnam, reporting on the situation in the countryside;

—And a large-scale military aid program, if the United States succeeds in removing the requirement of the October agreement that military resupply take place only on a one-for-one basis.

In short, the United States is gearing up to

U.S. Pressure Behind Thieu

Times News Services

PARIS — The United States threw its support today behind the Christmas peace package proposed by South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu and accused Hanoi of using "high pressure" tactics in an attempt to impose an incomplete peace settlement.

Heyward Isham, representing the United States at the weekly session of the semi-public Paris peace talks, also told the Communists it was futile for them to continue clamoring for signature of the ceasefire agreement drafted in October by Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho.

"In our country, the high pressure salesman who tries to obtain immediate signature of an incomplete contract only succeeds in arousing suspicion about the transaction," Isham said.

Nixon arranged a meeting for today with his adviser, who returned shortly before midnight Wednesday night from nine days of bargaining in Paris with Tho.

Asked by reporters to comment on the promise he made seven weeks ago that "peace is at hand," Kissinger replied: "Well, that's a great phrase."

He added that he could not comment on the Paris talks until he had reported to Nixon.

Asked whether there would be peace by Christmas, Kissinger said he did not want to make any predictions.

Nixon's decision to summon Kissinger to Washington was regarded by observers as an indication that a final pact had not been agreed upon, although White House spokesman Ronald Ziegler would give no sign whether or not progress had been made.

Ziegler told reporters Kissinger would remain in contact via cables with Tho who is also leaving Paris, and a decision would be taken later whether and when new talks between them should be held.

Dump Blasted

SAIGON (UPI) — Two Communist commandos blew up South Vietnam's largest ammunition dump today in a series of explosions so powerful they lit up the sky over Saigon and shattered windows in the downtown area.

South Vietnamese command spokesmen said the two Viet Cong guerrillas slipped into the installation shortly before midnight, planted the charges and escaped into darkness although they were fired on by guards at the installation.

Four hours later, the first of four blasts rocked the downtown area and injured an undetermined number of people, most of them by flying glass.

Minor explosions were still erupting 10 hours later.

The spokesmen said the four giant explosions destroyed at least 1,000 tons of munitions — including huge bunkers jammed with artillery and mortar shells, bombs and napalm.

The blasts at the Tuy Ha citadel, just eight miles east of Saigon at Cat Lai port on the Dong Nai River, broke hundreds of windows in the capital and ripped plaster from the ceilings and walls.

Hijack Heads Back

OTTAWA (CP) — A Quebecair jet hijacked in Wabush, Nfld., left here this afternoon with a flight plan filed for Montreal. Four crew members were aboard with the hijacker.

RCMP at Montreal said the hijacker, identified as John Maxwell Stanford, had expressed a wish to see his father in Ottawa when the jet arrived there.

It remained on the ground briefly before taking off for Montreal.

A transport department spokesman said a stewardess aboard the plane talked Stanford of Saint John, N.B., into returning to Montreal.

The aircraft arrived at Montreal at 2:30 p.m. and 52 passengers and one stewardess were allowed to disembark.

RCMP said the hijacker had demanded to fly to Winnipeg via Ottawa. He earlier said he wanted to fly to Vancouver.

Left aboard the jet after the passengers were allowed to disembark were the pilot, the co-pilot and two stewardesses. One stewardess was allowed to leave with the passengers, a Quebecair spokesman said.

He identified the pilot as Captain Maurice Quellet, the co-pilot as Uwe Munstermann and the stewardesses remaining aboard as Josette Cote and Lise Kazmerchuk. Stewardess Denise Gosselin left the aircraft with the passengers. All the crew are from Montreal.

Shannon Letcher, 18, en route from Wabush to her home in Moncton, N.B., said the hijacker stood at the back of the aircraft during most of the flight "issuing orders and waving his gun around."

"I was three seats in front and crunched down on my seat," she said.

Richard Carriere, who works in Labrador City, said the hijacker was wearing a coat over a ski sweather and was carrying a rifle.

"I didn't know what was happening at first," Mr. Carriere said.

Ottawa Softens Bilingual Rules

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government today tempered its bilingualism policy by issuing a series of nine public service language principles designed to take the problems of unilingual employees and job applicants into account.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury said bilingual positions within the public service will be designated by the end of 1973 and properly occupied by the end of 1978.

The announcement shifted the government's target date for implementing functional bilingualism within the public service from the end of 1975 to the end of 1978 and switched the approach from requiring that a percentage of employees within various categories be bilingual to defining specific jobs as bilingual or unilingual.

One of the main features of the new program is that unilingual persons will be accepted as candidates for bilingual jobs if they are willing to take language courses and achieve the degree of language proficiency demanded by the job within a year.

The principle also guarantees a person currently holding a job security in that job even if it is designated bilingual next year and the employee cannot or does not choose to become bilingual.

Such employees will be given a year's notice that the job is to be designated bilingual, offered up to a year's language training to qualify under the new requirements, and be offered a transfer to an equivalent unilingual job if they didn't try to qualify or are not successful at doing so.

If they do not want to transfer they will be entitled to retain the position — even though it had been designated bilingual — and other personnel will be brought in to meet the bilingual requirements of the job.

Drury said that perhaps 25,000 of the 100,000 federal jobs existing across the country would be designated as bilingual by the end of 1978, although he said his estimate would be impossible to verify until job designation is completed next year.

The government's bilingualism policy has been criticized from two main directions — from unilingual public servants worried about their futures and from segments of the general public who maintain that the whole bilingualism effort is a waste of time and is being rammed down the country's throat.

While making major concessions to the first group, Drury made none to the second.

He said that of 16 million English-speaking Canadians, more than 14 million of them

Truman Slipping

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Harry S. Truman continued to slip overnight in his fight to stay alive and his doctors said today his condition is "very serious." Hospital officials said the 88-year-old former president of the United States had a restless night and was unaware of anyone speaking to him.

Ulster Vote Set

LONDON (Reuter) — The British government announced today a March 8 date for a referendum in which the people of Northern Ireland will decide whether they want to remain part of the United Kingdom or link up with the Irish Republic.

Tests Underground?

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — France is busy preparing for underground nuclear tests in its Marquizas archipelago, 1,000 miles northeast of here, in a move aimed at silencing criticism of her atmospheric atomic blasts, according to news reports here Wednesday.

LONG JOHN DAYS OVER FOR A WHILE

The forecast is for temperatures in the 40s on Friday and complete clearance of the city's snow by Saturday.

The winds have switched to a westerly direction bringing in warmer air off the ocean.

Two storms in the Pacific, however, are expected to hit Victoria together Friday, causing southeasterly winds at nearly gale force in exposed areas and dumping snow on the north coast and wet snow along the south coast of Vancouver Island.

This is expected to turn to rain as the temperature rises.

PHILLIPS
. . . an easy victory

Phillips Leads TEAM In Routing Old Guard

VANCOUVER (CP) — Art Phillips cakewalked into the mayoralty of Canada's third-largest city Wednesday night, leading into power some political neophytes from an organization only four years old.

Phillips, a 42-year-old millionaire investment dealer, became the city's first-ever mayor from The Electors Action Movement (TEAM) and in the process carried enough of his followers into power to break a 25-year-old stranglehold on civic politics held by the rival Non-Partisan Association.

Although votes in the city of Vancouver were not counted, it was apparent Wednesday night that ratepayers in the Greater Vancouver regional hospital district had given overwhelming approval to a $95 million referendum for hospital construction.

TEAM won control of city council, school board and park board as voters turned out the NPA, former to keep the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation out of city hall.

TEAM took eight out of 10 council seats, eight of the nine school board seats and four of the seven park board positions.

But it was Phillips who led the way for his supporters.

He opened a wide lead from the first poll, increased it at every poll thereafter and ended the counting with a margin of more than 52,000 votes over his nearest opponent, winning more than 70 per cent of the vote.

In second place was Brian Campbell of the New Democratic Party, with Angie Dennis of the Committee of Progressive Electors third and independent Gordon Turner last.

Voting was light, with less than 30 per cent of the 265,000 eligible voters turning out for their third election in less than four months.

Another deterrent to a larger turnout was a heavy snowfall which dumped more than three inches of snow on the city.

Some blunders by the opposition and the retirement of Tom Campbell after three two-year terms as mayor helped Phillips win easily.

Campbell said he was stepping down both "for my own good and for the city's," leaving the way clear for Phillips, who will take over as mayor Jan. 1. He had been an alderman since 1968.

Campbell had represented the NPA, which failed to find a candidate to replace him.

The organization originally chose 50-year-old lawyer Bill Street as its mayoral nominee, then suffered acute embarrassment as local media played up a possible conflict of interest between Street's candidacy and his role as advocate before city council on behalf of private enterprise and as the NPA's chief fund-raising bagman.

If Phillips has his way, the election will mark the last time Vancouver voters will be faced with the chore of choosing 10 aldermen, nine school board and seven parks board position.

Astronauts Set To Head Home

HOUSTON (CP) — Eugene Cernan stepped off the moon today, leaving in the lunar sand perhaps the last footprint of the generation which first challenged space. Exploration by the Apollo moonships ended with Cernan's last words from the dusty surface before preparing for blastoff to earth: "Godspeed the crew of Apollo 17."

The lift-off was scheduled for 2:56 p.m. today, Victoria time.

". . . As I take these last steps from the surface back home, for some time to come," Cernan said before entering the Apollo landing ship Challenger, "I believe history will record that America's challenge of today has forged man's destiny of tomorrow.'

Then he added: "And as we leave the moon and Taurus-Littrow we leave as we came, and, God willing, we shall return, with peace and hope for all mankind. Godspeed the crew of Apollo 17."

Turning, Cernan then followed his crewmate, Harrison

LOWER FARES BUT NO WAR

Times News Services

GENEVA — Lower air fares are in prospect for trans-Atlantic travellers following the breakdown of the international airlines' price-fixing machinery, although an all-out price war is not expected.

The International Air Transport Association announced Wednesday that scheduled airlines flying between the United States and Europe can set their own fares in open competition starting Feb. 1.

Meanwhile, United Air Lines announced Wednesday that a plan will go into effect next June which will allow passengers to fly between certain points in the United States at charter rates — about 50 per cent below normal fares.

United said that next year it would fly DC-8s at charter rates between New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Las Vegas and Honolulu.

Under the plan, the round-trip fare between New York and Los Angeles would be $129; at present it is $336.

It would cost $229 to fly round trip between New York and Honolulu, compared with the present $468.

To fly at the special rates, a passenger would have to buy a ticket at least 90 days before the day of travel.

The ticket would have to be bought from Trade Winds Tours of Hawaii, a travel agency which is United's partner in the venture.

The 40 airlines flying the North Atlantic and major connecting routes failed to agree on new rates after five months of negotiations.

U.S. lines wanted higher fares to offset the business they are losing to cheap-rate charter lines; the Europeans argued that the answer was lower fares to fill up the big planes they now are flying with many empty seats.
